Berlin Cheers French Leaders as Envoys of Peace

BRIAND AND LAVAL LAY FOUNDATION FOR FRIENDSHIP

BETTER BUSINESS PARLEY OBJECTIVE

Representatives of Two Nations Immediately Reach Basis for Economic Negotiations.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and his premier, Pierre Laval, came to Berlin today, were cheered by German crowds, and began Franco-German parleys on the problem of economic co-operation.

They promptly reached an agreement in principle with German statesmen for a non-political consultative committee to seek means to better economic relations between the two countries and thus gradually improve feelings on both sides.

The committee would be composed of state functionaries, industrial employers and employes. Four key industries—chemicals, electricity, iron and coal—were embraced in the preliminary discussions, which were based on the report of Sir Walter Layton last month recommending to the bank for international settlements renewal of German credits.

It was emphasized that measures to be adopted in the conference, which will be resumed tomorrow, were not to be directed against any third power. The final result of the conversations is to be announced tomorrow night.

Wreath to Tomb.

Soon after the arrival of the French statesmen, M. Briand took a wreath to the tomb of Gustav Stresemann, Germany's late foreign minister, who was so closely identified with the policy of rapprochement and friendship with France.

Crowds cheered the French visitors at the station, followed them to their hotel and called "Briand, Briand!" until the foreign minister and his cabinet chief appeared on the balcony to be welcomed by Germans waving their hats and shouting "Hoch!" and "Vive la paix!"

Premier Laval issued a statement a few minutes later at the French embassy and spoke a few words over the radio in friendly greeting to the German people, while M. Briand slipped away in company with the new French ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, and motored to the cemetery "for the very first thing I must do in Berlin."

In tribute to the Fatherland's postwar apostle of peace, he laid a wreath of white chrysanthemums on the tomb of his late friend and co-worker in the cause of international solidarity.

Note of Sentiment.

His gesture thus injected a note of sentiment at the beginning of the Franco-German week-end conversations destined to be concerned largely with unsentimental problems of economic co-operation.

Premier Laval, on the other hand, laid stress on the hard facts of the situation in his statement to the German and foreign press. He said it was too much to hope that this visit, although a landmark in Franco-German relations, would clear away all misunderstandings, "but if the two nations are compelled to observe the wisdom of avoiding for the present certain difficult problems, they at least are determined to consider those solutions which are possible, in order to pave the way for better future mutual relations between France and Germany."

In the economic sphere, it was already possible to go beyond words and take definite action, Premier Laval said, "and we will act."

Ends Deadlock

Governor Theodore Bilbo, of Mississippi, Sunday ended a long deadlock between the legislative and administrative branches of that state's government when he called a special session of the legislature to meet Tuesday.

GOV. BILBO CALLS SPECIAL SESSION

Mississippi Solons Will Meet Tuesday To Study State's Financial Crisis.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 27.—(AP)—An extraordinary session of the Mississippi legislature, to save the state from threatened "poverty, distress and bankruptcy," was called today by Governor Theodore G. Bilbo to convene Tuesday.

Measures listed in the call, to which the governor's proclamation said others might be added after the legislature convenes, were:

Cotton acreage reduction similar to steps taken recently by Texas; lifting of a $7,000,000 deficit from the state treasury; correction in the 1930 state banking act for issuance of $5,000,000 in state bonds to pay holders of state deposit guaranty certificates; issuance of bonds to pay holders of state deposit guaranty certificates; issuance of bonds for hard-surfaced road program to relieve unemployment; reduction in governmental operating expenses, and tax relief.

Governor Bilbo asked for a "harmony" session "with only one object in view—give these problems careful and patriotic consideration, and in this great hour of Mississippi's distress let there be no discord."

"No Time for Politics."

"This is no time for personal, partisan and political matters to be presented—the situation is desperate," the proclamation said.

"The people are crying and praying and hoping for immediate and substantial relief and every minute of the legislature's time should be devoted to policies and measures that will give them every ray of hope in this, the darkest hour in the history of the state."

"Unless something is done at once," he said, "over half the homes in Mississippi will be sold for taxes and there will be a bread line by the first

New York To Honor Georgia '4-H Girl'

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Two young official guests from the south will be received with municipal honors at the city hall tomorrow for their achievements in farming.

They are Miss Mary Todd, 22, of Winterville, Ga., and Andrew Colebank, 23, of Germantown, Tenn., winners of the first annual National 4-H Club fellowship contest. A part of their trip will be an airplane ride over the metropolis. They also will visit Wall Street.

A nine-month's course of education with the United States department of agriculture in Washington will be their ultimate reward for having been selected as the boy and girl who might best bring the viewpoint of youth to that department.

CONSUMER BUYING IS PROSPERITY KEY, GIFFORD ASSERTS

Head of Unemployment Relief Group Declares Jobs Can Be Created Only By This Means.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Consumer buying was the pilot recommended by Walter S. Gifford tonight to steer the nation from the uncharted morass of depression.

"If the public buys neither work nor goods it is the public that is indirectly discharging men," the president's national relief director told the country in the first of a series of addresses on the winter's relief problem.

Both national radio networks were made available for Gifford's first public discussion of conditions since his appointment to direct relief work. The president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company warned "this depression will not be ended by a panacea."

Four-Point Program.

He advocated a 4-point program of community planning to meet unemployment problems where they exist. It included:

1. Appointment of a statewide committee of leading citizens by the governor.

2. Organization of an emergency committee in needy communities.

3. Determination by this committee of the probable unemployment load and the development of ways to meet it by providing employment or relief.

4. Reports to the state committees on plans of the local groups.

Gifford said emergencies like the present one occur in this country so seldom "there is not and probably ought not to be permanent organization to cope with it." He described the condition as temporary and best met by voluntary mass efforts of the people.

"Employers have already to an extraordinary degree," he said, "spread employment available in their own plants among their workers. Many have gone the limit. . . .

"A high percentage of those gainfully employed are working full time, either on full wages and salaries or with reductions no greater than the decrease in the cost of living. They constitute . . . a main source of work. They can . . . give work or buy things which give work in manufacture.

Buying Needed.

"Business can spread out its available work . . . but broadly speaking it can't give additional work unless the consumer buys its products. It is your depression and mine and when and how we get out of it lies in each person's power to some degree."

Gifford said 6,000,000 was the estimate "most generally mentioned" for the number of unemployed. He explained the total of jobs cannot be measured accurately but that "each city, town or county can know its own problem accurately enough for practical purposes."

The worst problems are in the large cities, he said, which "happily have the most accumulated wealth to meet the emergency.

"There is every indication that these great centers can and will take care of themselves," Gifford said, adding:

"The burden due to unemployment has undoubtedly increased greatly but my experience with unemployment relief in New York last year led me to believe that this country has the knowledge, organization, wealth and generosity to care effectively for the distress of this coming winter. My five weeks in Washington have confirmed that belief."

Four Burn to Death In New York Fire

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Four persons lost their lives in a fire which early today swept through a seven-story East Side tenement and left 26 families homeless.

The victims were Miss Regina Eliakin, 45, and Pauline, her daughter, 10; Christie De Biasi, 15, and his sister, Mary, 13. The Eliakin child died some hours after the others, in a hospital.

Seven injured persons were in hospitals, all in serious condition.

Atlanta Papers Renew Wage Scale of Printers

Union Printers Accept Unanimously and Vote Agreement for Three Years; Officials Praise Local Publishers for "Maintaining Purchasing Power."

Atlanta's three newspapers, numbered among the largest employers in the south, Sunday agreed to maintain the present wage scale in their composing rooms for a period of three years from October 1. This action, coming at a time when numbers of the largest employers in the United States are announcing wage and salary reductions, was unanimously accepted by the local typographical union, and expressions of high praise of the Atlanta publishers were spoken from the floor of the union meeting.

The printers met at union headquarters Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and were informed by the union committee designated to negotiate with the employers that the publishers had instructed them to "write their own ticket" for any reasonable length of time. Short discussion followed the announcement of the offer by the publishers to renew a wage scale written at a time of unprecedented prosperity and the union men voted to sign the agreement for a period of three years. This equals the longest span ever covered by an Atlanta typographical union contract and extends the scale, signed originally in 1925 and renewed in 1928, through September, 1934.

The new scale not only continues in effect the wage scale of 1928 and 1925, but maintains the minimum hour guarantee and the basic situations ratio.

In advocating the acceptance of the offer of the publishers to continue the wage scale, union negotiators told the meeting that they considered the newspapers' action a concrete demonstration of the fact that they "practice what they preach."

"It is," said W. S. Griffin, one of the negotiators from The Constitution chapel, "almost unprecedented in these times. We found the publishers willing to go all the way with us and there was present always a marked mutual respect between employers and employes. I consider the contract the most advantageous ever signed in this section of the country."

Luther Still, chairman of The Constitution employes' committee, said: "I cannot imagine any adverse criticism from any printer. It really represents a substantial increase when checked against the commodity price indices. I am sure that labor can point to the Atlanta publishers as their real friends. The newspapers are putting into practice the program they are advocating for the country—'keep up the purchasing power of employes.'"

The union action marks the conclusion of ten days of conferences between the publishers and the printers. The agreement will be signed by both employers and printers' executives today.

Negotiators representing Atlanta Typographical Union No. 48 were: Luther Still and W. S. Griffin, Constitution chapel; Jeff Abercrombie and S. G. Springfield, Georgian chapel; Ernest Bass and C. H. Ariail, Journal chapel. Publishers' negotiators were Clark Howell Sr. and Clark Howell Jr., Constitution; Major John S. Cohen and John Brice, Journal; Herbert Porter and Ernest Camp, Georgian.

William Newton, president of Atlanta Typographical Union No. 48, conducted the contract meeting.

The agreement affects more than 250 printers and apprentices in the three Atlanta newspapers.

New York Bankers Say Effect of Suspension Will Be Negligible.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Norway and Sweden have temporarily gone off the gold standard, just a week after Great Britain took similar action.

Exportation of gold was prohibited by both countries and the bank discount rates were raised to 8 per cent.

The discount rate of Norway went up from 5 per cent and that of Sweden from 6 per cent.

The decision to follow the action of Great Britain was made at cabinet meetings in Oslo and Stockholm Sunday.

Both countries have been off the gold standard before. Norway suspended the gold standard shortly after the outbreak of the World War and returned to it in 1928, when it again permitted the export of gold. Sweden had restored the gold standard several years earlier.

Sweden's financial position was said by Finance Minister Hamrin last Friday, when the bank rate was raised from 5 per cent to 6 per cent, to be as sound as any in Europe. The country had a surplus of several million kronor in July and exports were only slightly under last year's, he said.

Norway's finances for the fiscal year ending last July, on the other hand, showed a net deficit of approximately $1,600,000.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Norwegian government announced tonight that Norway will temporarily suspend the gold standard.

The decision to suspend the gold standard was made at a cabinet meeting held shortly before midnight.

It was also decided to place an embargo upon gold exports.

The discount rate of the Bank of Norway has been raised to 8 per cent.

Concurrently with Norway's decision to suspend the gold standard, the central banks of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland announced they had decided upon joint measures for the future to maintain the parity of currency.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Swedish state council decided to suspend the gold standard until November 30 and the national bank

Roosevelt Expects To Start South Today

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt said today he hoped to complete the selection of his emergency unemployment relief commission in time for him to leave for Warm Springs, Ga., tomorrow night.

The governor is selecting a commission of three outstanding citizens to administer the state's $20,000,000 relief fund during the winter.

1 DEAD, 8 INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

One youth, a cripple, was killed, and eight other persons were injured when the two automobiles in which they were riding at about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night crashed at the corner of North Virginia avenue and Stillwood road.

Ridley "Red" Davis, 19, a laundry mechanic, of 2170 Piedmont road, was fatally injured when the automobile in which he was riding with five companions overturned and landed on him, crushing several ribs, breaking his right arm and shoulder, and possibly puncturing his lung. He was taken to Grady hospital, where he died shortly after arrival. Young Davis had but one leg, the left.

The other occupants of his car were Fred Scurry, the driver, of 2163 Piedmont road; Amanda Freeland, 16; Howard Clark, 16, and Marie Evans, 15, all of 12 Grand View avenue, and Virginia Jenkins 18, of Piedmont road. They were all slightly injured, having received minor cuts about the body.

In the other automobile were John A. Griffin Jr., of 1225 Euclid avenue, who received a severe fracture of the right leg; Robert W. Barnes, of 820 Piedmont road, and Jack Browning Jr., of 803 Pershing Point, the driver, both of whom were only slightly injured. All three of the occupants of the Browning car were freshmen at Emory University.

Cases of reckless driving was made against Scurry and young Browning was summoned to appear at at the police station for questioning. An eye-witness, Bond Almand, of 717 Brookridge drive, N. E., said that the two cars came together head-on, and that neither appeared to have been going particularly fast.

New Yorker Tortured By 'Love Kidnapers'

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(UP)—Three kidnapers abducted Mario Barrone, 25, early today, beat him almost into insensibility, applied lighted cigarets to his naked body and tied him up with picture wire because of attentions he had been paying to another man's wife.

Barrone was found in a shack behind a Brooklyn apartment house. His clothing was gone, his eyes were puffed and his body was bruised and burned. The wire was cutting his flesh at the wrists and the ankles.

He told police that James Merola, 31, and two other men had kidnaped and tortured him because he had been living with Merola's wife, Margaret, an attractive brunette.

He and Mrs. Merola were in the Barrone apartment in Manhattan last night, he said, when the three men came in and forced both of them to go to Brooklyn with them. Merola and one of his companions took Barrone to the shack, where they beat him in the face with their fists, burned him with the cigarets and bound him, he said.

CHINESE RIOTERS SLAY 6 JAPANESE NEAR HONGKONG

Foreign Minister Wang Is Near Death After Attack in Nanking on Failure to Gain League Help.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Japan last night drafted a reply to the recent note of the United States secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson, emphasizing that Japan has refrained from further hostilities in Manchuria "in common with the hope of the American government," and stressing that Japan is making every possible effort toward preventing any spread of the trouble.

Foreign Minister C. T. Wang, in Nanking, was perhaps fatally wounded by a group of students during an indignation demonstration following his failure to bring about league council intervention in the Manchurian situation.

A Japanese, his wife, mother, two sons and a nurse maid were killed by Chinese at Kowloon, on the mainland opposite Hongkong. The mobs spared only a 3-year-old child. When police arrived, finding a mob of 1,000 wrecking the Japanese residence, they charged, killing two Chinese in the ensuing fight.

Police at Hongkong and Kowloon were armed with riot guns today and ordered to shoot without warning if necessary in view of the grave situation.

Authorities said communist influences were behind the anti-Japanese demonstrations at Hongkong and Kowloon, which have been in progress for more than three days.

Tokyo authorities expressed some concern over the situation at Hongkong. Japanese consuls at Hongkong and Canton were instructed to prepare for an immediate evacuation of their nationals if the situation becomes worse.

NANKING, China, Sept. 28.—(AP)—(Monday.)—Foreign Minister C. T. Wang was probably fatally injured when he was attacked today by a group of students who invaded the foreign office to voice their indignation at Wang's alleged failure to induce the League of Nations council effectively to intervene in the Manchurian crisis.

Wang received several heavy blows on the head, his assailants using clubs and inkpots.

The assault upon the foreign minister was the climax of a demonstration by several hundred students, indignant at reports that the League of Nations had decided not to intervene in the struggle between Japan and China in Manchuria.

The students paraded the streets, then rushed to the foreign office, forcing their way into Wang's office, which was wrecked. Doors, windows and furniture was smashed to bits.

Wang's clothing was nearly torn off. He was rescued finally by a group of servants, who broke through a back window, carrying the foreign minister out the same way.

Before the parade reached the foreign office, friends warned Wang he was likely to be the object of the students' wrath. The foreign minister refused to seek shelter elsewhere, however, declaring "I shall remain at my post and attend to my duties."

Foreign office attaches said they believed Wang would not have escaped alive if his servants had not gone to his rescue.

The attack occurred about 10 a. m.

THOMPSON B. FRENCH.

THOMPSON FRENCH IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Former Advertising Manager of The Constitution Heart Attack Victim.

Thompson B. French, one of the most widely-known advertising figures in Atlanta, and known throughout the south in that field, died unexpectedly Sunday morning at his home, 810 Juniper street, N. E. Death was attributed to a heart attack, which Mr. French suffered late Saturday night.

Until the time of his retirement two years ago Mr. French had been advertising manager of The Constitution for more than twenty years. He ended a service of thirty-five years when ill health caused him to withdraw from business, during which time he had won a host of friends who admired him for his straightforward character, modesty and high standard of ethics.

Mr. French was 61 years of age at the time of his death. He was a native of Nashville, Tenn., having come Atlanta thirty-six years ago. A short time after his arrival he became associated with the business department of The Constitution, entering the advertising field shortly afterward, and being assigned to important executive positions by virtue of his acute knowledge of his profession.

Mr. French was a devoted member of All Saints' Episcopal church, and, although he seldom took ostentatious part in civic enterprises, he was known to virtually every leading businessman in the city.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alexine S. French, who before her marriage was Miss Alexine Seawright, of Nashville, and a son, McCrea French, of the Finance Acceptance Corporation of Atlanta. Two grandchildren, McCrea French Jr. and Lucy Watts French, also survive.

Funeral services will be held at Spring Hill chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, officiating. Interment will be in West View.

Late News Broadcast To Go on Air at 10:15

Atlanta's only late night news broadcast, given each night by The Constitution over station WGST, hereafter will go on the air from 10:15 o'clock to 10:30, instead of from 10 o'clock to 10:15, as a part of extensive rearrangement of radio schedules following the discontinuance of daylight saving time in New York Sunday.

A more complete and up-to-the-minute news service will now be possible, as starting the broadcast 15 minutes later will enable many important flashes to be put on the air, which before arrived at The Constitution office too late.

TWO ARE WARNED 'TO CHANGE STORY' OR LEAVE ATLANTA

HOMES PROTECTED BY POLICE CORDON

"Jealousy" Angle Abandoned in Slaying Probe; 4 Murder Indictments To Be Sought Tuesday.

Efforts to silence potential witnesses in the Ben Lichtenstein murder case Sunday caused a shotgun squad to be thrown about the vicinity of the apartment house where the wealthy sportsman-grocer was shot to death a few minutes after midnight last Monday.

Threats were received Saturday and Sunday by two neighbors of the slain man who had seen the killer run from the apartment house entrance to a parked car a moment after the shooting.

In both cases the potential witnesses were warned to "change your story or leave town within three days."

One of those to receive two threats Saturday was a woman known to have been helpful in describing the "death car" to police and to have informed Lieutenant T. O. Sturdivant that she had seen the slayer run from the apartment house to the waiting automobile. This woman, it became known Sunday, appealed to Sturdivant Saturday night for protection, and the head of the police investigation of the case sent a carload of plainclothesmen armed with shotguns to stand watch over the premises.

Second Witness Threatened.

On Sunday, after an all-night vigil during which nothing untoward was reported, it became known that another possible witness in the sensational Ponce de Leon avenue murder had received a threat to keep silent on salient points of testimony. The identity of the two persons receiving those threats was guarded by Sturdivant, who admitted, however, that he believed a desperate effort is being made to intimidate those who saw the slayer.

Intimation that a criminal gang exists in Atlanta and is strongly interwoven into the circumstances of "Big Ben's" murder was made by Lieutenant Sturdivant, following the confession Saturday of J. D. Lee, alias Sumner Compton, said by detectives to have been the "trigger man," or actual slayer, of the sportsman.

Will "Tell Plenty" Later.

Before he signed the sworn statement, Lee had told officers that when the "proper time" came he would "tell plenty." It was after this oral statement that Sturdivant's investigators took into custody L. A. Mitchell, of 263 Crew street, admittedly a bootlegger who operates in the Houston-Ivy section, and who the detective lieutenant says is a hi-jacker.

The importance of testimony by the two threatened witnesses, it was pointed out by officers, would lie in the fact that ultimately a jury may be called upon to decide whether it was Lee who ran from the apartment house or Harry Kosnofsky, 21-year-old Atlanta youth, who, in his confession, admits he drove the "death car," but who lays the actual shooting to Lee.

Lee, on the other hand, has admitted being present when Lichtenstein was killed but denies it was he who fired the shot.

After Kosnofsky had confessed, naming Lee as the killer, Lee told officers that he had struck Lichtenstein in the head but claimed that it was Kosnofsky who fired the shot.

Lee's confession, sworn to after he had consulted with an attorney retained for him by an unnamed man, was as follows:

Denies Firing Shot.

"I admit I was present when Ben Lichtenstein was killed. I deny I fired the shot. The motive was not robbery."

Threats against witnesses were re-

CHESTER, Ill., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Freed by the death-bed confession of another, Jesse Lucas left Menard prison today after serving 23 years for a murder he always insisted he did not commit.

"And now I'm vindicated," Lucas told Mayor T. B. Wright, of Mount Carmel, Ill., who met him at the prison gates and took him back to his home town.

A death-bed confession by George R. Pond, a farmer who lived near Decker, Ind., that he killed Clyde Showalter, a young stock buyer, 26 years ago, gave Lucas his freedom.

After examining affidavits attesting to the credibility of Pond's confession, the Illinois board of pardons and paroles paroled Lucas to Mayor Wright. Mayor Wright said Lucas "can make my home his home," and promised him a job in his lumber yard at Mount Carmel.

What officials now have decided was a miscarriage of justice almost caused Lucas' widowed mother to end her days in prison. Mrs. Lucas, who died three years ago, was indicted with her son and both were found guilty of the murder of Showalter, whose body was found floating in the Patoka river 26 years ago. A new trial, however, was obtained for Mrs. Lucas and she was freed.

Miss Stansbury To Press Claim To $50,000,000 Wendel Estate

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Miss Rosa Dew Stansbury, 74-year-old Vicksburg, Miss., woman, announced through her attorney, Wilfield P. Jones, of Atlanta, Ga., here tonight that she would seek to establish her claim to the $50,000,000 estate of the late Miss Ella Von E. Wendel, of New York.

"I wish I was a little younger if I am going to get it," she said wistfully, referring to the fortune.

About the legal channels through which she will seek to inherit the millions, she had little to say. She occasionally interposed remarks to Mr. Jones as he outlined the genealogy of her family, but they were mainly to correct him or help his memory.

"This is the first interview in which I have taken part," she said. "You reporters please don't call me a 'little old woman.' I'm old only in years. I like young people and always have.

"I have never been wealthy," she went on, "but I wish I was a little younger if I'm going to get it."

Dressed in a gray dress and gray hat, her smiling blue eyes sparkled as she contemplated possible wealth at her advanced age. Her activeness belied her years as she bustled her

TAX PROBER ATTACKS GANG BRIBE CLAIMS

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The federal government's investigation of a story that two alleged gangsters paid $75,000 to escape prison sentences for income tax violations tonight apparently had settled on the theory that it was a plot to discredit District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson.

Johnson has directed successful income tax prosecutions against several gangsters and the cases against others, including "Scarface Al" Capone, are pending. Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, who were said by a friend to have paid the bribe, have pleaded guilty.

"What the purpose of this story conveys except to impair my usefulness as a public official, I do not understand," Johnson said in making a complete denial that anyone in his office accepted a bribe.

Representatives of United States Attorney General William D. Mitchell were here investigating the case, under the direction of H. H. Clegg, St. Louis, formerly in charge of the department of justice investigation bureau.

Possibility that Druggan and Lake may have been swindled by some person who misrepresented himself as having power with the prosecutor, or that the money may have reached Johnson's office, also was being studied by the government agents.

GANGSTER ANGLE SEEN IN MURDER

garded as tending to give weight to the theory that Lichtenstein's slayer or slayers may have been hired assassins. The rumor that someone was engaged to "bump" the big playboy - grocer persists in some quarters, because of his reputation of being a man of many love affairs.

These threats also tended to give impetus to investigators' efforts to determine whether there exists in Atlanta an underworld gang similar to that which prevails in larger cities, where witnesses are intimidated or even put out of the way to prevent testimony at a crucial stage.

Indictments Being Prepared.

Sturdivant Sunday proceeded methodically with plans for putting the case before the grand jury. With four men under arrest—two of whom he regards as "first degree" suspects; the third as an accessory before the fact, and a fourth brought into the investigation through bootleg connections—Sturdivant is confident of at least four first-degree indictments, he said. The detective spent all of Sunday afternoon in conference with Assistant Solicitor Ed A. Stephens in preparing a draft of the indictments which will be presented to the grand jury Tuesday.

Kosnofsky, first to confess, has named Lee as the man who went into Lichtenstein's apartment, struck him over the head and fired the shot that ended his life. Kosnofsky, in his confession, admits he drove the "death car," but contends he was forced by Lee to do so.

Lee, on the other hand, while admitting in a sworn statement that he was present when Lichtenstein was murdered, says that he did not fire the fatal shot, and injected a riddle into the slaying when he added the terse statement: "The motive was not robbery." In previous statements, which were oral, Lee accused Kosnofsky of having fired the shot that killed the wealthy grocer, and for his part admitted having struck the grocer in the head.

Cox Accuses Both.

George Cox, Atlanta poolroom habitue, held under charges of suspicion as an accessory before the fact, has expressed the opinion that both Lee and Kosnofsky did the killing. Cox professes ignorance that murder was intended, insisting that he warned Lee and Kosnofsky on the night of the killing not to go to Lichtenstein's apartment.

Mitchell was brought into the case Saturday night with his arrest by Sturdivant, who declined to reveal the connection between bootlegging and the sportsman's death. Mitchell likewise is being held on a blanket charge of suspicion.

Sunday night Sturdivant announced that he definitely has abandoned the "woman theory" in the murder of "Big Ben."

"As we go ahead with investigation of this case," Sturdivant said, "the robbery motive becomes more and more strengthened. Regardless of what Lee says in his confession, I am confident that Lichtenstein was killed for the $2,000 diamond ring he wore and what money he was believed to have possessed last Monday night."

Kosnofsky in both his first and second statements—the latter being a straight confession—asserted that robbery had been the motive which had caused him to drive Lee to the Ponce de Leon apartment house where Lichtenstein resided.

Sturdivant Sunday said he would seek a first-degree murder indictment against the billiard player, Cox.

"Cox," he said, "was an accessory before the fact, and I believe he knew what was going to happen. I am going to try to get the grand jury to indict that man as one of the important figures in this murder."

Regarded as "Tip-off Man."

Previously Sturdivant had asserted he considered Cox to have played a minor role in the tragedy—that of "tip-off man" for the robbery of Lichtenstein.

Just what charges will be sought against the bootlegger, Mitchell, were not clear Sunday night. Sturdivant alleges that he is a hi-jacker and contends that Mitchell for several months has been engaged in hi-jacking loads of liquor between here and Savannah.

One of the current puzzles of the case is the identity of the person or persons who engaged an Atlanta lawyer to represent Lee. On Saturday morning, without previous announcement, an attorney presented himself at the county jail, with Sturdivant accompanying him, and said he had been retained to protect the interests of the so-called "trigger man."

Feared "Frame-Up."

Lee, however, refused to have anything to do with the lawyer, announcing that he feared he was being the victim of an attempt to "frame" him into making a damaging statement. He declined to talk to the lawyer until he had heard several fellow prisoners assure him that they knew the man to be a bona fide attorney, and then he conferred at length with him. Following the conference he issued his brief, carefully-worded confession.

Outcropping of threats at such an early stage of the investigation caused detectives Sunday to turn their attention anew to suggestions of a "hired killer" angle. In police circles it was argued that the threats, apparently genuine in character, savored strongly of interested parties in the murder of the grocer; and this, coupled with the rather emphatic statement of the alleged killer that the motive was other than robbery, clung stubbornly to the case, to puzzle investigators whose attention thus far has been riveted to the sole motive of robbery.

Low Rates on Fair's 'School Day' Announced for Teachers, Students

This year, for the first time in history, school children and teachers will be admitted to the grandstand on school day, Monday, October 5, for 10 cents, instead of the usual charge of 50 cents, Oscar Mills, general manager of the Southeastern Fair Association, announced Sunday night.

This, linked with the fact that the admission charge for teachers and school children will be 15 cents instead of 50 cents on that day, and the fact that Monday also will feature many specialties in addition to the regular grandstand program of races and vaudeville, including the state-wide spelling bee, prompted the prediction by fair association officials that the attendance for that day alone will easily go beyond 75,000.

The certainty of an especially big attendance on Monday necessitates elaborate preparations for the safety of the thousands of children who will attend, and Mr. Mills announced that adequate facilities will be provided for handling as many as 100,000 individuals and that parking space will be available for more than 5,000 automobiles.

Interest in the state-wide spelling bee this year is unusually high because of the decision to limit contestants, one from each county in Georgia, to children of school age. Cash prizes, ranging from $8 for the eleventh prize up to $50 for the second and $100 for the first, will be awarded. Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology, is chairman of the spelling bee committee. Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of education, will be in charge, with Superintendent W. A. Sutton, of the Atlanta schools, assisting. Referees are Miss Mary Postell and Superintendent Jere A. Wells.

"Ford day," an innovation Mr. Mills has set for Tuesday, has aroused the interest of Ford owners, not only in Georgia, but in neighboring states as well. Reports from distant counties tell of owners of ancient cars preparing for the drive to Atlanta and the number of ancient models expected to convey large families to Lakewood on Tuesday should be a spectacle arresting the attention of anyone. Every Ford automobile is to be admitted to the fair grounds on Ford day without the customary charge of 50 cents for automobiles. Prizes are to be awarded in front of the grandstand at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The sum of $50 is to be given for the largest family coming to the fair in one Ford. The owner of the Ford coming the greatest distance gets $25 and the oldest Ford wins $10. The same program applies to Chevrolet automobiles on Friday, October 9, which, in addition to being Chevrolet day, will be known as press day in honor of the scores of editors who will be guests of Lee Ashcraft, president of the fair association, and also will be military day, the spectacular military program of sham battles and drills being arranged by a Junior Chamber of Commerce committee headed by Duncan Peek.

Other special days during fair week include opening day on Saturday, October 3. Tuesday will be sports day, Mike Benton, chairman. Wednesday there will be a program of special interest to farmers, details to be worked out by a committee headed by Ivan Allen, of the executive council. Aviation day will come Thursday, Sam Wilkes being chairman of the committee on arrangements. The Saturday program is yet to be announced.

BERLIN CHEERS FRENCH LEADERS

powered to consider all economic questions affecting both countries. This program may seem modest, he said, but if definite practical results are achieved it will have been the best way of serving the cause of rapprochement.

Berlin's welcome to the Frenchmen was restricted by police precautions. Friedrichstrasse station was guarded closely against any possibility of unfriendly incidents. Mounted police, plainclothesmen and police in trucks and afoot dominated the scene. Special police passes were required even to walk through Brandenburg gate onto Unter den Linden.

Nevertheless, crowds formed, but they cheered enthusiastically for "Briand."

The foreign minister's visit to Herr Stresemann's grave was unheralded, but quite a few persons looked on in silence as Ambassador Francois Poncet carried the wreath to the tomb and placed it on the standstone sarcophagus.

Then all withdrew a short distance while M. Briand alone ascended the stone steps to the tomb and stood a few moments.

Silently the onlookers followed the aging statesman to the gate. As he entered an automobile they shouted: "Peace! Hoch Stresemann. Hoch Deutschland."

Foreign Minister Briand and Premier Laval lunched at noon with Foreign Minister Julius Curtius and afterward withdrew for the first of the conferences. They were guests of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening at a dinner at the chancellory tonight.

At the dinner, attended by a number of high officials, which he gave for the Frenchmen tonight, Chancellor Bruening said it had become common knowledge that Europe could only be saved from utter ruin by speedy mutual assistance.

It was equally patent to all, he said, that European stabilization can only be obtained on the day when both Germany and France shall have buried memories of the past and face the future together.

"We know there is much in these memories that separates us," he said, "but that should be no reason for ignoring the inevitable consequence that Franco-German co-operation is essential to save the economic system of Europe and the world.

"We need not conceal the fact that we still have a long and difficult way to go and that much of the past needs clearing away, but this should not be allowed to hamper our efforts."

Responding in French for himself and Foreign Minister Briand, M. Laval said nothing characterized more strikingly the importance of their visit than the fact that the present company was assembled in the hall of the Berlin congress of 1878, since which no French premier had visited Berlin in an official capacity.

He complimented the chancellor as one of the intellectual elite and a man of rare ability and accomplishments.

"We not only came to pay a courtesy visit," Premier Laval said, "but also to take up and continue the threads of the Paris and London conferences."

It behooved all statesmen to exert goodwill toward co-operation, he said, "for only thereby can confidence, without which there is no credit, no exchange of commodities, no fruitful labor and no help in the present crisis, be gradually restored."

"In economic questions and on the basis outlined at Geneva," he added, "we will endeavor to bring about closer co-operation and trustful relationships. We hope our conferences will not only create a permanent organism, but also a method capable of producing practical results."

FRENCH PRESS PLEASED WITH HARMONY OUTLOOK

PARIS, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The French press today generally expressed pleasure with the reception given Premier Pierre Laval and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand at Berlin. Most papers professed belief the visit will be productive of as economic agreement calculated to bring both countries closely together.

MACDONALD RETURNS FROM WEEK-END REST

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald returned to Downing street tonight after a week-end of rest in the country. He said he was feeling much better.

The prime minister is expected some time this week to announce his decision regarding the holding of a general election.

J. H. Thomas, minister of dominions and colonies, said today in an address to railway workers at Derby that a general election is inevitable and that it could not be delayed long. He said he would seek re-election from Derby, although he has been repudiated by his union, and that he would campaign under the leadership of Prime Minister MacDonald.

ATLANTA FIRM TO AID CUDAHY COTTON PLAN

Williamson & Inman Co., Inc., Will Handle Cotton-Buying Here.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(UP)—The Cudahy Packing Company, which will trade meat for cotton in a plan somewhat similar to that of William Wrigley's "chewing gum for cotton" campaign, announced the appointment tonight of two prominent southern cotton brokers to handle its business.

Cook & Co., of Memphis, Tenn., and Williamson & Inman Company, Inc., of Atlanta, Ga., will carry out the plan, whereby the Cudahy Company will invest an amount equal to 10 per cent of its sales in southern territory between September 1 and December 1, 1931, in cotton, as a means of creating a cash market for a portion of this year's surplus crop.

"Our policy of buying cotton is meeting with the most favorable response in the south," said President E. A. Cudahy Jr. "Our only purpose in investing a part of the amount of our sales in the south in cotton is to express our concern for the welfare of the south in a practical way."

'PROTECTION' OF BISHOP ASKED BY REV. SMITH

Sparta Minister Appeals to Bishop Moore From Bishop DuBose.

SPARTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—Rev. Rembert G. Smith, pastor of the Methodist church here, has written to Bishop John M. Moore, appealing for the "protection of the episcopal office," following the action of Bishop H. M. DuBose in appointing a committee to investigate charges made by Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith, in his letter, points out that he brought no charges against Bishop DuBose in his church capacity, but as a citizen, for his action in the presidential campaign of 1928 in "raising and spending money," as reported by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church.

He also states that it is contrary to law for Bishop DuBose to have appointed a committee to hear charges against himself by himself, and it was likewise wrong not to notify Mr. Smith and permit him to present his evidence before the committee.

In view of the fact that Bishop DuBose has announced through the public press that a church board or committee has cleared him of charges, Mr. Smith asks Bishop Moore to declare that the DuBose-appointed committee was not a legally appointed church board or committee and that its verdict has no standing in church law.

The committee referred to consisted of Dr. H. L. Edmondson, Dr. R. L. Russell and Dr. Wallace Rogers, of the North Georgia conference, and it held its meeting in Atlanta on September 18.

Mr. Smith, in his letter to Bishop Moore, says:

"I am asking you also to write Bishop DuBose that as the bishop in charge of the North Georgia conference you regard his action in this matter to be an invasion of my rights as a member of that conference and to be without warrant in the laws of our church."

Three Out of Four Jail Inmates Escape

NAHUNTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—(AP) Three out of the four prisoners at the Brantley county jail here escaped last night.

WARRENTON MEETING ASKS SPECIAL SESSION

WARRENTON, Ga., Sept. 27.—At a meeting of approximately 500 farmers, businessmen and citizens interested in the growing of cotton, held at the courthouse here Saturday, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that we petition Richard B. Russell Jr., governor of the state of Georgia, to immediately call into extra session the legislature for the purpose of enacting a law prohibiting the planting of cotton at any place within the state during the year 1932.

"Resolved, that we urge this at this time so that the people of the other cotton growing states will see the lead of Georgia and thus have this influence brought on them to enact semilar legislation.

"Resolved further, that we believe such action on the part of the legislature would have a stimulating and immediate effect on the price of cotton, and if it should cause cotton to go up in price only 15 points, that such a rise would mean more than $150,000 received by the farmers of Georgia for their cotton, at an expense to the state of only a few days' session of the legislature.

"Resolved further, that in view of the pitiable condition of the farmers of Georgia, and their children and families, the expenditure necessary for a few days of extra session is justified as it might and would result in much good and the alleviation of much suffering in Georgia, whether such a law was finally enacted by three-fourths of the cotton growing states or not, and if enacted, an immediate benefit in our opinion."

CHRISTIANITY PASSING, ASSERTS DR. HOLMES

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Christianity, as it has been known, is passing from the world, the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes told his Community church congregation today. In its place, he said a new religious spirit is coming.

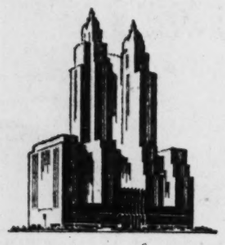

Dr. Holmes, who returned last week from an extended tour of Europe, declared the Christian churches of that continent no longer were battling with each other for sectarian supremacy but were driven together "in confused retreat before the onsweeping forces of triumphant atheism."

"Organized religion in Europe," he said, "Jewish as well as Christian, is a pathetic spectacle. Smitten by indifference in England, by military contempt in Germany, by open and avowed hostility in Russia, the Christian churches are everywhere approaching their end, and in some cases have actually reached it."

57 SERVICE CROSSES PRESENTED VETERANS

U. D. C. Chapter at Thomasville Sets National Record at Sunday Meeting.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 27.—John B. Gordon Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, of Thomasville, established a national record this afternoon when at a meeting presided over by Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, president of the Georgia U. D. C., 57 crosses of service were presented to veterans of the World War and the Spanish-American War who are descendants of Confederate veterans.

This is the largest number of these crosses ever given at any one presentation. The local chapter also established a national record for largest number of crosses of service presented in any one calendar year. The chapter presented 43 of the crosses last spring and these, added to the ones presented today, make a grand total of 100 presentations in the year 1931. The first presentation occurred on April 26, which is Confederate Memorial Day, and the presentations today are on the birthday of Admiral Raphael Semmes, of the Confederate navy. Records entitling the veterans to receive the crosses were assembled and verified by Miss Elizabeth Hopkins, historian of the John B. Gordon chapter, who devoted much time and work to that end.

The crosses were presented to each veteran in person, or in case of the decease of the veterans, to a member of his family.

Those upon whom the crosses were bestowed today were: Spanish-American War, Captain T. N. Hopkins (deceased). Roscoe Luke, Rhydon G. Mays Sr.; World War, Glen J. Allred, E. J. Burns, Harvey L. Chastain, Truman O. Holland, Arvah E. Clay, James P. Clay, Thelma H. Clay, W. T. Covington (deceased), P. I. Dixon, C. B. Dunn, H. E. Dyke, F. V. Eidson, W. B. Eidson, J. S. Fortner, A. R. Winter's Approach Heralded by Drop To 52-Degree Level

Cold weather north of Atlanta sent its feelers down this way Sunday with the result that the temperature Sunday morning dropped to a minimum of 52. The mercury column did not rise above 68 all day. Today's temperatures will be slightly higher, ranging from a few degrees above Sunday's minimum to a maximum of about 75 or 76, according to the weather bureau. Monday will be clear, the forecast said.

From 75 degrees at 7 o'clock Saturday night, the mercury tumbled to 52 at 5 o'clock Sunday morning, and at 6:30 Sunday morning was back on the way up with a reading of 53. At noon the reading was 65, and the maximum of 68 came at 2:30 Sunday afternoon. At 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon the thermometer was down to 61 with the prospect of dropping to a point between 52 and 55 degrees early this morning.

A high pressure area which settled over Atlanta some time ago held this section in the grip of hot weather until the encroachment of a low pressure area from the north brought winds Saturday which rapidly dissipated the warmth.

Temperatures in the low fifties were not uncommon in a number of cities Sunday, which had readings up in the eighties and nineties last week.

The cool weather brought relief from abnormally high late September temperatures that had Dixie sweltering.

Asheville, in the western North Carolina mountains, had a low reading of 50. Raleigh reported a minimum of 61; Greensboro 58, and Winston-Salem 56.

Chilly weather also prevailed in Virginia. Richmond had a low of 59, Norfolk 66 and Lynchburg 56.

Nashville, Tenn., shivered under a minimum temperature of 53, while Chattanooga had a low of 65 and Memphis 52.

Other minimum readings included: New Orleans 65 (a drop of 14 below Saturday's low); Little Rock, 55; Louisville, Ky., 55; Macon, Ga., 58; Tampa, Fla., 71; Birmingham, Ala., 50; Jacksonville, Fla., 72; Meridian, Miss., 54; Mobile, Ala., 60; Vicksburg, Miss., 56.

Slightly warmer weather was predicted for today or Tuesday in parts of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, although some of the states were promised a continuation of cool weather through Monday.

YOUNG URGED TO LEAD ANTI-TRUST LAW FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP) The Philadelphia Board of Trade today appealed to Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, to lead a movement for reform of the federal anti-trust laws. The appeal was made in a letter from Philip H. Gobley, president of the board.

"A strict adherence to safe and sane principles," the letter read, "contemplates the rehabilitation of individual industry. Legal restrictions must be eased sufficiently to permit this.

"It is the earnest desire of our board that leading citizens of the country like yourself confer and cooperate in effecting a policy of reorganization of our federal trade law structure."

Moslem Head Pledges Gandhi Full Support

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Agha Khan, spiritual head of India's 78,000,000 Moslems, declared in a radio broadcast from London today that his people would insist upon protection of their interests at the India round-table conference now sitting there.

His address followed immediately an announcement that Mahatma Gandhi had requested a private conference with Khan tomorrow in an effort to smooth out the differences between the Hindus and Moslems.

Agha Khan, in his address on the Columbia network, said the Moslems, who he said constitute one-fourth of India's 335,000,000 population, would "fight shoulder to shoulder with their Hindu brothers for a constitution that will give India a stable government."

Unceasing Campaign of Dry Agents Costs Capone Syndicate $500,000

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—An unceasing drive by a squad of college graduate prohibition agents headed by Special Agent Eliot Ness has cost "Scarface Al" Capone's liquor syndicate at least a half million dollars during the last six months, it was claimed today.

Members of Ness' squad have earned for themselves the name of "The Untouchables," because of their refusal to accept bribes from alcohol distillers, rum runners, and beer truck drivers. Ness was one of the agents who uncovered evidence on which Capone has been indicted for 10,000 prohibition law violations.

Figures compiled today showed that Ness and his squad have seized $144,000 worth of brewery equipment, a $25,000 shipment of wine, $12,250 worth of whisky, automobiles and trucks valued at $17,000, and 7,292 barrels of beer worth $55 a barrel retail—said to belong to Capone enterprises.

In addition, Capone has $100,000 tied up in bonds, while legal fees and court costs may total several hundred thousand dollars before prohibition and income tax violation charges against the gangster are completed.

Hoover's Guests Confine Activities As Fall Weather Hits Rapidan

LURAY, Va., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Autumn's chill laid a cool hand today upon President Hoover's camp in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Guests confined their activities largely to keeping warm by hiking and riding or sitting around a big log fire after last night's frosty breezes.

Speculation over the topics of conversation centered largely upon the possible transfer of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt from Porto Rico to the Philippines as governor general.

The governor of the island was a guest, along with Chairman Bingham, of the senate territories committee, which handles Porto Rican legislation.

From Colonel Roosevelt has come neither confirmation nor denial of reports he would go to Manila. A shrug has been his answer. Once he said "that statement will have to come from headquarters."

Beer and the soldiers' bonus were a couple of other possible subjects for discussion. Roosevelt, with Governor Brucker, of Michigan, also a guest, supported the president's bonus stand at the Detroit convention of the American Legion. To them were expected to go Mr. Hoover's thanks.

The president plans to leave the camp early tomorrow for the return to the capital. Among the other guests today were Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Brucker, H. O. Wolfe, Columbus (Ohio) publisher, and Mrs. Wolfe; Fred L. Shedd, Philadelphia editor, and Mrs. Shedd.

discount rate was raised from 6 per cent to 8 per cent.

Exportation of gold by any bank or foreign national banks is prohibited under the order and the state bank will suspend gold payments until November 30 unless a notice of resumption is given before that date.

EFFECT TO BE NEGLIGIBLE, SAY NEW YORK BANKERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Bankers here said tonight they expected the effect of the suspension of the gold standard in Sweden and Norway to be negligible as far as Wall Street is concerned, since neither country has any appreciable balance here.

It had been rumored here for several days that several of the countries whose finances were tied up in London, particularly Sweden, might follow the London example in temporarily suspending the gold standard.

Swedish finances are linked closely with those of London, where Sweden maintains large balances. Sweden last week raised its discount rate to 6 per cent to conform with the rate at London.

Norway and Denmark, as well as Sweden, have most of their international business with London. Denmark, a few days ago, took steps similar to that of England in placing an embargo on exports of gold.

Among other countries which Wall Street feared might go off the gold standard was Japan, but unofficial though authentic advices received from Tokyo late in the week said the Japanese were giving no consideration to the subject.

All Scandinavian currencies were weak in the foreign exchange markets here last week. Their government bonds were down substantially.

ATLANTA, GA., SEPT. 28, 1931.

TURNING FARMS INTO FORESTS.

Indication of the growing realization of the importance of reforestation is to be found in the radical program announced for New York state by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Not only does this ambitious plan include the reforesting of mountain districts, denuded by man or from natural causes, but it is predicted that 20 per cent of the present farm lands of the state will again be planted in forest trees.

Governor Roosevelt in discussing the plan in a recent article in The Country Home lays special emphasis on the importance to a commonwealth of its land being put to the proper use.

As the fundamental asset of every commonwealth is its land, says Governor Roosevelt, the statesmanship that achieves the most effective uses of land and of the land's resources is likely to accomplish the greatest good for its people. Nearly every social, economic and political problem ties up, in some way, with the use of land.

This is true of the strange and confusing situation that presents itself these days with surpluses of food, making life difficult for farmers on the one hand, and on the other hand thousands of men hard put to find work to earn food for their families. We should be able to farm only the land that is suitable for profitable agriculture, and to find other use for land that is better adapted to other purposes. In the state of New York we are beginning to demonstrate that this is an entirely possible ideal, with consequences vastly more far-reaching than are apparent on the surface.

While Georgia, just emerging as it is from the financial tangle in which its government has been struggling during recent years, is in no position to undertake at this time any elaborate plan of reforestation, it would be well that careful study of the situation be made so that when the proper time comes this vitally important work can be undertaken with the least possible delay.

Especially is the preservation of the watersheds of our mountain region important to the economic welfare and health of all the people of the state. From these north Georgia mountains come the water supply and hydro-electric power for cities located all the way to the Florida line.

The streams from these watersheds will begin to dwindle in future years if steps are not taken to protect and increase their protecting forests. The leaves of the forest trees form a protective covering for the earth, which largely prevents the evaporation of moisture even in the hottest weather. This moisture, therefore, is attracted to the springs which are the head waters of most of the rivers flowing through Georgia.

During the past half century the forests of Georgia have been inexcusably decimated and now with the fast growing number of industries added rapidly to our population density, serious thought must be given to the safeguarding of the water supply, which is one of the state's most valuable assets.

AN ANTI-CRIME LEGION.

In the October issue of the Forum is an article by General Smedley Butler, who needs no introduction to the people, in which he advocates the creation of a national anti-crime legion, enlisting it from the unemployed legionnaires of the World War. It is a plan for the crushing of the gangsters, gunmen, racketeers and bandits that has the usual candor and punch of the famous commander of Uncle Sam's justly celebrated marine corps.

Policing forces of like character exist in other countries, such as the gendarmerie of France, the rural guards of Cuba and Mexico, the Northwestern Mounted police of Canada and the Texas Rangers in our own land. It is easy to visualize the power and efficiency of the Butler form of "anti-crime legion," properly recruited and commanded by able officers who served in the American expeditionary forces overseas.

The force, to be most effective, would need to be a national force, uncontrolled and unhampered by states and local powers. Those latter are too often under terror of the outlaws or in secret league with them. But a large legion of the men who "beat the Hun" over there and who are trustworthy to serve the interests of life and property over here, would soon make the United States too hot to hold the gangsters and bandits who now defy all governments, state and national, and spread fear and death wherever they operate.

There is no reason why the congress should not consider this Butler proposition, work out an operative scheme of national defense against the rampant outlaws of the era, and make our country once more the habitation of a people secure in law and order.

PAPER FOR POSTERITY.

For several years, under pressure and measures initiated by Senator Harris, of this state, the federal bureau of standards, the economic divisions of the department of agriculture, and the supply bureaus of the army and navy, have been seeking out new uses for both raw and manufactured cotton. The idea is to multiply the consumption of cotton in its native land and where the pride and patriotism of the people should prefer it to any substitute imported from abroad.

It is not necessary here to catalog the many new uses and substitutions that have been discovered by the government agencies. It is safe enough to say that if the people of the country would respond to those discoveries and make the uses of cotton pointed out as practical and profitable, the cotton surplus problem would seldom appear in our agricultural economy.

It is now given out from the bureau of standards that they have discovered a process of making from cotton a new paper that will last longer than any heretofore known or that is now in existence. A life for it as carrier of printed matter of hundreds of years is predicted. A newspaper deposited in a corner stone in Washington city about 50 years ago was found recently to have so faded out as to be scarcely legible.

This new paper brought into commercial use should be a great boon to publishers of all kinds and the creators of records needed to be preserved for many generations. Thereby it should add a new value to cotton.

The one possible drawback in the case is that congress may decide to have the Congressional Record printed on the properpetual paper. In that event we feel sure posterity would feel justified in carrying a vengeful grudge against us.

NEW ORDER OF GOVERNOR.

The young and progressive governor of Maine, William Tudor Gardiner, is making thorough reforms in the operations of the executive department of the state. He says that department is the one for whose administration the chief executive is personally and directly responsible. As for the other departments the governor has only limited powers of direction, but for his own department he must assume full responsibility and answer to the people.

Already Governor Gardiner has fully investigated the executive department and found many chances to reduce personnel, cut out duplicated duties, reduce expenses without loss of efficiency or time of rendering proper services. The result is a saving already of many thousands of dollars, promising to reach for the fiscal year a net saving of $50,000.

A valuable part of this demonstration is the light it sheds upon the operations of all the government departments. But their operations are largely dictated by the legislature and can be reformed only by its consent and co-operation. Governor Gardiner intends to put the issue of government retrenchments up to the next session, and, based upon what he has accomplished in his department, show how equivalent trimmings in all departments will save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the taxpayers.

The course of Governor Gardiner, a virile World War veteran who esteems public duty superior to political convenience, is being applauded by his Maine constituents and praised by press and people outside of that commonwealth. The view he has taken of his responsibility for the executive department is novel; but it is correct, and it would be highly to the benefit of the taxpayers of other slates to have the "Gardiner idea" spread over the whole Union.

Next year there will be a lot of people asking the republicans about their "fool dinner pail."

Another sign of crumbling sovietism. Razors have been put on sale in Moscow.

Now it is charged that bars have been opened on vessels of the United States lines, thereby putting Uncle Sam in the liquor business. And yet they say Atlanta's mayor doesn't know what he is talking about.

Now if the weather would just get football-minded the regular Saturday afternoon fall frenzies could go forward in fine shape.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Rome the Eternal.

I have always wanted to approach Rome on foot. Reading the descriptions of medieval travelers, who were awed by the majestic spectacle of the Eternal City, gave me the desire to have the same pleasure some day. But it never came of it. I always rushed pele-mele into that ugly railway station and missed the sight that made, among others, Luther fall on his knees when he beheld the towering skyline of the city with a fervent: "Ave Roma, Immortalis!" (I salute thee, O Immortal Rome). This time I managed to walk into Rome from Naples. It took me a whole long, hot and dusty day. But I came from the wrong side and the hills obscured my vision. Still I had good company. Several peasant girls were going my way.

At a little village, 14 miles out, a parish priest joined us. In the evening we dined all together on the outskirts of the city. Wonderful it was to see how that cleric made the macaroni slide down his gullet. The girls screamed with laughter. I spoiled a perfectly good vest in the attempt to imitate him. We drank a little Chianti to top off the succulent veal-broth, and then were on our way once more.

Marvelous how the world had changed. My tiredness had left me. To the amusement of my companions I intoned a little soldier ditty that I heard long ago on the Asiago plateau when we were watching the Austrians come swooping down the Venetian plain. One of the girls returned a compliment with "La Donn' e mobile!" accompanied by the priest, who sang in a basso deeper even than Chaliapin can muster. It was altogether delightful.

The Angelus had rung long ago when we finally walked into the city. We bade each other a farewell. "A revederci," (till we meet again) said the priest. When I pointed out that there was little chance as I was going north, he added, "Well, if not here, then surely later in 'Paradisio.'"

It's a wonderful prospect to know that some day we will resume our wandering with that excellent company of humble folks in the golden streets of another world.

* * * *

By the Way.

On our tramp we passed a wayside shrine to the Madonna. A little lamp was lit, although it was broad daylight, and great bunches of flowers lay at the feet of Our Lady. Our clerical companion saluted very reverently as we strode by. But the girls giggled. They were having a little joke of their own at the time. The priest was indignant.

"Do you think," he asked the peasant maidens, "that it is so nice to stand there all day like Our Lady and then be laughed at by ignorant women?"

The girls were duly ashamed.

"Believe me," he added, "you may well have spoiled our entire journey with your disrespect. How can we expect good fortune when we disregard the heavenly messengers?"

This was a direct appeal to peasant superstitution and the girls made haste to return and kneel a moment before the statue to square things.

Superiority Of Peasants.

I asked the country vicar if he had never had the desire to get a parish in some big city.

"Among the heavenly gifts which have been bestowed upon me," he replied, "is this one, that I have always had, a rural parish. I thank God daily for it. It would have been impossible for me to stand the noise of a city like Naples or Rome. And then the perfumes with which the women sprinkle themselves. I believe they would make me sick if I had to go on sniffing them day after day. This way, with an occasional visit to Rome, I bear up under it. I know that the fresh breezes that blow in my own parish will soon cleanse me."

"Well," I objected, "do your peasants smell much better?"

"They do," he replied. "They don't need any artificial perfumes. They wash themselves when they have time. They have good health. They change their shirts on Sunday morning before coming to church and they simply breathe honesty. They work in the open air and the wind carries away all impurities. Ah, I love them," he went on. "If I had to live in a city, really I believe I would choke to death!"

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Good the Legion Action on Liquor May Bring to the States.

The action of the American Legion convention in petitioning congress to submit to the states some proposition looking to reform of the prohibition policy of the nation should awaken the prohibition forces to the fact that they must face that, or some similar proposal, frankly, and with full front.

Liquor conditions in the country are no longer amenable to sentimental propaganda and constantly failing efforts to enforce prohibition laws against which there is an ever-growing rebellion.

Prohibition is losing popular support every day. It is evidenced by the actions of large bodies of men whose good character and influence stand far above any charge that they are the dupes or partners of the advocates of a renewed liquor trade for personal gain.

* * * *

Barriers to Sane Treatment.

There are many barriers to obstruct the way to sane thinking and wise action toward changing the prohibition policy so as to retain whatever benefits can be assigned to it and to get rid of the great mass of evils which it has undoubtedly produced.

As long as the baseline of the prohibitionists is that absolute prohibition as phrased in the 18th amendment is the only acceptable method of dealing with the liquor problem, they cannot be looked to for sane thinking and statesmanlike treatment of the subject.

And as long as the natural and commercial anti-prohibitionists are obviously maneuvering to bring back a licensed liquor traffic for profiteering purposes, with the privately operated corner saloon as the "combine" to do their harvesting, they cannot be relied upon to give aid to any compromise policy that wisdom and patriotism might suggest.

So the program of neither of those parties offers the people the better way out of their present wet inundation.

* * * *

The Puzzle to Get a Plan.

The first question arising out of the action of the American Legion is what plan can the congress agree upon to answer the Legion's petition?

Congress, of course, can go no farther than to "request" the states to take a vote of their qualified voters, and if a state agrees to do that, what proposal will the voters vote upon?

If the voters are asked, "Do you favor repeal of the 18th amendment?" and only that question should be submitted in every state, there is no question, in my mind, that the verdict in more than three-fourths of the states would be strongly "No."

With the open drunkard-making saloons outlawed these dozen years it is a 10-to-1 bet that the people would not simply repeal the prohibition amendment and open the way for the return of the saloon and all its brood of hellish evils.

There are millions of good people who would prefer to wrestle with the outlawed traffic of today than to go back to the licensed evils of the saloon days of old. They are for anything but that!

* * * *

Where Modification Bogs Down.

Suppose the proposition suggested by congress and submitted by the states is, "Shall the Volstead act be amended to permit the manufacture of light wines and beers?"

In the first place I cannot imagine more than a dozen states that would submit that issue to a popular referendum. Before the 18th amendment was submitted even 33 states had put their ban on beer equally with all harder liquors.

Those whose memories are alive enough to recall the nation-wide campaigns to bring about constitutional prohibition will tell you that the fight was largely against beer. The consumption of ardent spirits was then at a low limit and wines were so little in use as to call for no special attention. It was the high per capita of beer consumption that produced the bulk of all the national drunkenness, the debauchment of labor, the spoilation of homes and the demoralization of social order and decency. Beer was the real cause of prohibition.

The Courts Are in the Way.

While the 18th amendment stands in the constitution as it now reads the courts generally, and the supreme court of the United States especially, will not uphold any act of congress that would allow the making, sale, transportation, etc., of "intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes." Such an act would be unconstitutional on its face.

But someone may argue, beer up to a certain alcoholic content by volume, is not an "intoxicating liquor." Yet the supreme court has held that congress was within its powers when it said that beer holding more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol is an "intoxicating liquor."

The question of how much alcohol makes beer a commonly intoxicating liquor must eventually be adjudicated by the courts and courts all over the nation had, before the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, "taken judicial notice" that the beer of commerce was intoxicating in fact. And that, too, when most of the beer sold over bar counters and in the bottle trade contained scarcely ever more more than 3 1-2 per cent of alcohol.

* * * *

Would Benefit But Few States.

Another question which arises with many persons in many states is why they should get all fussed up over the situation for the benefit of the few states that might vote to indulge in beer?

Congress cannot force beer upon all states, nor upon any state that refuses to give it any legal sanction.

Why should the Georgia legionnaires, for instance, take an active part in the beer crusade when they know the people of this state are not likely ever again to allow beer to be made or sold among them?

The enjoyment of beer and the revenues from beer might be voted in several New England states, in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Missouri, maybe in Nevada, but it is hard to line up 20 of the 48 states in which there would be found a majority for repeal of the amendment, or Volstead act modification of doubtful validity.

* * * *

Agitation Will Be Profitable.

I am glad the American Legion has had the nerve to make its proposal to congress, because it will lead to more lively and general agitation of the problem all over the country.

It will spread and intensify the truth that the present type of prohibition is a failure and that the sobriety and safety of the people need a new and better treatment.

In the long run the common sense of the country will agree upon and demand the substitution of state option for the 18th amendment, plus the use of federal power to protect dry states instead of trying to protect the whole continent from rum-smugglers, liquor runners, bootleggers and speakeasies.

It is a sure thing that when the people of Georgia have their eyes drawn off of Uncle Sam and understand that they must enforce their own dry laws, we will have far more prohibition than we have had since the 18th amendment was ratified.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 27.—Arlene Judge and Wesley Ruggles announced their engagement after the football game at Los Angeles Saturday, and thereby set the Hollywood supposers at rest for the time being.

There's a ring and everything; so it's not one of the rumored romances for which this colony is famous. Nor is it one of those taken-for-granted things which often slip into matrimony.

Arlene Judge's engagement to Wesley Ruggles was vigorously denied last week. But we're funny that way out here. Until movie stars are ready to tell their romances, they always deny them. Marriages are invariably kept secret if possible—or were formerly—but it is fast becoming chic to announce the engagement in the old-time way.

Bill Powell and Carole Lombard did this, to the vast surprise of the colony. And Sally Eilers and Hoot Gibson had a wedding with rice and orange blossoms and long tulle veil and all the conventional rest of it. So Wesley Ruggles and Arlene Judge, having set another conventional precedent in the way of engagement parties, will possibly follow suit with a formal old-time wedding.

Charles Ruggles made the engagement announcement. The two brothers have been inseparables for years, even when their work has kept them on opposite sides of the continent a good part of the time. Their tremendous friendship is unique in professional circles.

A torrid sun beat down upon the stadium but 70,000 enthusiasts attended the opening of the football season. Professional Hollywood, which has been so faithful to the tennis tournaments during the week past, was there in autumnal furs and splendor, although it was uncomfortably warm even in the shady interior of a motor.

John and Marcellite Boles were there. This singing actor has become a great figure in cinematics of late years. His popularity, threatened for a bit with the depression in musicals, has come to the fore again with the present revival of the musical theme in sound pictures.

Browns and greens dominated the color scheme, although a glimpse at the throng revealed it to be a blue crowd. A close analysis showed this to be due to the fact that the majority were men—all of them coatless—and all of them—or at least 90 per cent of them in blue shirts.

George O'Brien is to be found at all sports events. His arrival is greeted with almost as much commotion as the entrance of the team into the arena. Idol of all those athletes, he is yet the most self-effacing delightful person one might find.

Difference in Income And Outgo of Business Root of State's Trouble

Editor Constitution: The real remedy for the present situation lies with each individual farmer. Neither prosperity nor a living can be accomplished by legislative inhibitions or restrictions, but it must come from the genius and well-directed and executed plans of the people and especially the farmer, because he directs and controls the living productions of all the land. We must conserve, preserve and increase the production of staple crops such as corn, wheat, oats, meat and hay.

Not only must increases along certain lines be made but retrenchment along others seem imperative, also.

Our cotton crop for the past four years has averaged in round numbers 1,281,000 bales. The government estimate for the 1931 crop is 1,311,000 bales and if sold on this day's market will bring $39,330,000. From this must be deducted $12,500,000 as the cost of 500,000 tons of commercial fertilizer used in this year's cotton crops and $3,600,000 for ginning, bagging and ties.

More than $50,000,000 worth of corn, oats, wheat, hay and meats were shipped into the state from bins and curing houses of the west; $40,800,000 worth of gasoline consumed from the oil fields of Texas and Oklahoma and an immense lubricating oil bill. Add to this more than $30,000 in the state and county ad valorem taxes exclusive of approximately $11,000,000 for local and county-wide school taxes.

Add to the above figures the immense drain from this state into the states east and north for automobiles.

The comparison between the income and outgo of the state's business is the answer to "What's the matter with Georgia."

COAL MINERS IN OHIO END WEEK'S STRIKE

MIDLFIELD, Ohio, Sept. 27.—(AP) The strike of more than 1,000 Athens county coal miners was ended today by a vote of the workers at a meeting addressed by officials of the United Mine Workers.

The men walked out last week following a dispute over the employment of check weighmen at the No. 5 mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Company at Murray City and the 10-X mine of the Western Fuel Company at Goose Run.

DOOLITTLE SHATTERS ANOTHER HOP RECORD

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Major James H. Doolittle arrived in Chicago late today after a record-breaking flight from Indianapolis. He announced he will remain here for 10 days while his racing plane is being streamlined to increase its speed.

The major's green and orange plane made the flight of 166 miles from Indianapolis to Chicago in 46 minutes, or at an average speed of about 216 miles an hour.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

SYMPATHECTOMY FOR THROMBOANGIITIS AND RAYNAUD'S AFFECTION.

Recently I cited here the very satisfactory results achieved in the majority of cases of thromboangiitis obliterans and Raynaud's disease by the operation known as sympathectomy—removing ganglia of the sympathetic nervous system.

A French physician by the name of Diez has now reported the results of lumbar sympathectomy in a series of seventy-five cases, with favorable results in most of them. (I cannot give laymen references to this scientific literature in any case, but I am always glad to furnish any data I have to physicians on request.)

Diez concludes that one may confidently employ this new treatment with the expectation of getting lasting benefit. Besides thromboangiitis, several other trophic disorders respond favorably to sympathectomy. A trophic disease is one due to some fault in the nerves controlling local nutrition. Among the disorders uniformly benefited by sympathectomy the French physician mentions acrocyanosis, Raynaud disease, perforating ulcer of the foot and acute gangrene.

This authority has found that the removal of the ganglions or way-stations of the sympathetic nerves is most satisfactorily done under spinal anesthesia, rather than general anesthesia.

That's all there is. There ain't no more I can tell or do about it. Don't write and ask me whether I think your sympathectomy would be good for your nives or whatnot, for I am not competent to form an opinion about that. Any good doctor who does any surgery is competent to do this operation if he thinks it advisable in your case. Your own doctor is the only one who can advise you about it. As I said, I'll cheerfully tell him all I know about any treatment if he asks me. I won't tell him anything on a third person's request, however.

My part is merely to bring to the layman's attention the fact that this new treatment is fairly satisfactory and available.

GOV. BILBO CALLS SPECIAL SESSION

of the year in every town in Mississippi with no one to furnish the bread. Poverty and distress, high tax burdens forcing bankruptcy, loss of homes by tax sales threaten every community in Mississippi."

Representative Walter Sillers, Rosedale, chairman of the house judiciary committee and a leading opponent of the administration in the past, tonight commended the governor's call for the harmonious session.

Agrees With Governor.

"I am willing to let bygones be bygones," he said. "I hope the legislature will respectfully entertain whatever recommendations the governor may make and I also hope he will submit them and then let the legislation take its natural course. If Governor Bilbo will show that spirit he will be the biggest surprised man in the world to see how these boys will work for him."

Necessity of an extra session to relieve the financial situation dates back to the regular session of 1928 which failed to enact a suitable revenue program. An extra session was called in the same year but the same situation—political differences again tied the matter in deadlock. Another extra session in 1929 and the regular session of 1930 were also unable to adjust differences between the governor and a majority of the house members. The senate, favorable to the governor, would pass a program but it would be rejected by the house. The house would then send over one of its proposals only to have it returned from the senate with unfavorable action. And the same deadlock has existed between the branches and the governor over road finance legislation.

In issuing the call Governor Bilbo ended months of deadlock between the legislative and executive branches of the state government.

With the commonwealth bearing a heavy deficit and steadily going further in debt, and with all branches of the government embarrassed for operating funds, Bilbo had been urged for months to call a session to provide revenue.

The governor steadfastly refused to issue the call, however, until he had secured the legislators' promise that they would not attempt to impeach him. This the lawmakers refused to do and the matter thus stood at a complete deadlock for months.

At one time during the interdepartmental duel the legislative leaders tried to assemble without the governor's sanction, but failed in this effort to force his hand.

The governor retires from office at the close of his term and will be succeeded by "Mike" Connor, an enemy of his policies.

MISS STANSBURG TO PRESS CLAIM

slight figure around a hotel lobby where she had conferred with her attorney. Miss Stansbury is hardly five feet tall and weighs about 100 pounds.

Referring to a paper she signed in New York under which she was paid $1,000 and promised $24,000 when the will is finally probated if she would not contest the document, she said she "certainly understood" that her attorney was to approve the paper before it became effective.

She said she knew of her relationship to the Wendels because an aunt, Mrs. Samuel H. Boyd, visited Miss Wendel "some 35 years ago."

Miss Stansbury at present is the traveling companion of Mrs. Alice Calder, of New Orleans.

She is visiting in Raleigh at the home of Mrs. Godfrey Cheshire, daughter-in-law of Bishop Joseph Blount Cheshire, of the Episcopal church.

Immediate relatives of Miss Stansbury who would share if the contest were successful are: John A. Grant, of Atlanta; Mrs. Gladys Grant Burke, of Atlanta; Loomis P. Grant, with the United Fruit Company, in Central America: Harry H. Stansbury, of Houston, Texas, and George Barbatt and Charles Barbatt, both of New Orleans.

NEW WALDORF-ASTORIA TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Several thousand employes and artisans today were giving the last touches to the new 47-story Waldorf-Astoria, in Park avenue, preparatory to its formal opening Wednesday. President Hoover, at Washington, will officiate at radio ceremonies.

The building cost $29,000,000. It is three times the size of its predecessor of the same name. Its towers reach 625 feet into the uptown skyline and it has 2,200 rooms which, with its foyers and public halls, contain 20,500,000 cubic feet of space, the largest in that respect of the world's hotels.

The old Waldorf-Astoria was 225 feet high, of 16 stories and 1,000 rooms.

Why Serve in the Ranks If You Can Be the General in Command?

By Robert Quillen

The modern woman eager for a career throws away her greatest opportunity.

She is like those misguided and unhappy men who scorn the work for which they have a natural talent and thus doom themselves to failure.

Her first false step is caused by her failure to understand that success is measured by achievement—not by methods or appearances.

Many an executive fails because he is unwilling to delegate authority to others and so wears himself out in the effort to supervise countless details.

Only the artist can win success by himself. Others achieve greatness by inspiring able lieutenants and thus multiplying themselves. No matter how great their genius, the world's Napoleons must win their crowns by using other men.

This is the fundamental secret of success overlooked by the modern woman. Though she alone is endowed by nature with the ability to multiply herself, she thrusts aside this priceless advantage and limits herself to the success that can be achieved by her own unaided efforts.

Women of genius can succeed as artists despite the limitations of their sex. In other fields, commonly dominated by men, their sex robs them of the success their intelligence deserves. Nature fixed their role; and no matter how masculine they may become, they fall short of the greatness they might achieve as women.

The great women of history, like the great executives of today, are those who learned to use men as tools.

Greatest of modern women was Belle Case, wife of Robert M. La Follette. She chose a man who was determined to be an actor and made him governor of a civilized state, a senator, a worthy candidate for the presidency. Of her own flesh and blood she created other men and made one of them a governor and another a senator.

Hers was a career no man can match.

Why should any woman possessed of brains exhaust her energies in doing man's work in defiance of nature when she can achieve ten times as much as the guide and inspiration of masculine tools?

Gandhi Says Boycott Issue Rests With Great Britain

BY ALVIN HALLMAN.

CLITHEROE, Lancashire, England, Sept. 27. — (AP) — Lancashire pressed its appeal to Mahatma Gandhi today for an arrangement which would lift the Indian boycott on English cotton goods and rescue its sinking industry.

But the mahatma offered only a straw. He offered it in these words:

"If Great Britain grants India her freedom and makes her an equal partner in the British family of nations, then I should be willing to advocate a prohibitive tariff on all foreign imports, except those of Great Britain, of which India would take the amount needed beyond her own productive capacity, such things as prices, shipping, etc., being equitable."

The nationalist leader of India entered upon his day of silence tonight as he took a train back to London, where tomorrow he will sit through the initial meeting of the minorities committee of the round table conference, one of the key groups of the Indian meeting.

His promise apparently was intended to insure Lancashire co-operation with Indians in the attainment of their political aspirations, but by the people of Lancashire, who feel that they are not in a position to make a political bargain, it was regarded as disheartening.

Their attempt while Gandhi was here, it was revealed today, was to show him the poverty of the area, brought about largely, they claim, through the Indian boycott and then seek an agreement for the exportation to India of perhaps 40 per cent of the Indian cloth needs, according to specific requirements.

The argument they used with the mahatma was that if he agreed to such an arrangement it would help to convince Englishmen of the responsibility of leaders of the independence movement and make them more willing to concede Indian political demands.

Gandhi's answer, in effect, was that he was unable to effect such a bargain unless he was in a place of power comparable to that now held by the viceroy—an attainment which obviously was not possible without success in the movement for independence.

There has been no progress thus far, he said, toward settlement of the Indian problem in the round table conference, although the situation was not retrogressive. The week's minority committee meetings will bring some of the most difficult phases of the conference to the fore.

Cool Wave Alters Jobless' Stand Against Picking Arkansas Cotton

HELENA, Ark., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Cool weather, rather than the threat of jail sentences, today was credited with having produced a change of heart among unemployed loiterers who promised to go voluntarily into the fields tomorrow as cotton pickers.

Officers said the intense heat of the past several weeks had caused many unemployed to frown upon the fields but with the advent of autumn weather yesterday that obstacle was removed.

"These men simply did not want to pick cotton all day long with a hot sun beating down on them," one officer said, "and I hardly blame them. Besides in the mornings and late afternoons the mosquitoes are fierce."

Officers here several days ago inaugurated a drive to force loiterers into the fields because of a shortage of labor.

Meanwhile, the idea spread, officials in other cities having taken similar steps to force unemployed to work at various pursuits.

At Pine Bluff, Ark., police rounded up 50 unemployed men and started a community turnip patch of five acres. The turnips and greens, when harvested, will be used to feed the unemployed.

Texarkana, Texas, officials posted a "no loafing" notice on the streets and announced "a great big rock pile needs a lot of work done."

Officers at Devalls Bluff, Ark., have rounded up loiterers and are sending them into cotton and rice feilds.

At Devalls Bluff and Helena the workers are taken to the fields in trucks,, which return them to the towns at night.

Although many unemployed have been put to work a shortage of labor still exists but officers believed the cool weather will give the loiterers "the urge" to seek employment as farm hands.

The price paid for cotton picking ranges from 35 to 45 cents a hundred pounds, which in the case of expert pickers, would afford a daily wage of between 75 cents and $1.

Bitterness ran high in Nanking today owing to what agitators called the League of Nations' desertion of China's cause.

HONGKONG MOBS KILL EIGHT JAPANESE IN RIOT

HONGKONG, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Declaring a state of emergency exists, the government late today called out troops to quell rioting mobs of Chinese at Kowloon, nearby on the mainland, after several days of anti-Japanese demonstrations. Police were armed with riot guns and ordered to shoot without warning if necessary.

A crowd of Chinese entered the home of Shimziro Vashashita, a Japanese, in an isolated district of Kowloon, killed him, his wife, mother, two sons and a nursemaid. Only a three-year-old baby was spared.

Police and soldiers arrived to find a mob of 1,000 Chinese wrecking the dwelling. In a fierce fight which followed two Chinese were killed by bayonets of the soldiers. Ten Chinese were arrested.

During the height of the disturbance many Japanese were attacked in isolated streets and injured sufficiently to require hospital treatment. Practically all Japanese shops have been wrecked and Japanese nationals are segregated in school buildings for protection.

With no more Japanese to attack, the mobs turned their attention on Chinese shops selling Japanese goods and wrecked many of them. Chinese householders threw their Japan-manufactured household utensils into the streets. Authorities used steam rollers to crush the discards in order to facilitate removal.

Authorities said they suspected communist influences were behind the rioting which the Chinese pursue sporadically with terrible vindicativeness.

Military authorities have assured the Japanese consul he would have full protection. Some Japanese, who have been segregated at diffrent points, have decided to return home.

At Kowloon two British destroyers were berthed alongside the wharves as protection for the big Japanese liner, Asama Maru, and the large Japanese shipping offices. Although these have not been damaged, several branch offices have been wrecked.

Some fear was expressed that Chinese resentment of police measures might produce a general anti-foreign movement.

JAPANESE FRAME REPLY TO AMERICAN NOTE

TOKYO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—A Japanese reply to United States Secretary of State Stimson, stressing that Japan, "in common with the hope of the American government," already has refrained from further hostilities in Manchuria, was expected to be dispatched within a few hours.

The reply answers a note by Secretary Stimson concerning occupation of several Manchurian cities by Japanese troops.

The Japanese reply adds that Japan is taking every precaution to prevent any extension of trouble to avoid further complications and stresses its contention that Japan is abstaining from violating any international agreements. Assurance is given that every effort is being made to reach an amicable settlement with the Chinese.

Meanwhile, officials here expressed some concern over the serious situation faced by Japanese nationals in south China. Dispatches received from Canton and Hongkong report several persons have been killed as the result of anti-Japanese feeling.

In view of these reports the cabinet cabled consuls urging them to prepare arrangements for an immediate evacuation of nationals in the event the situation becomes worse.

LEAGUE MORE HOPEFUL OF QUIET SETTLEMENT

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—(AP)—A hopeful attitude prevailed here tonight over the Sino-Japanese situation in Manchuria. The optimism apparently was shared by the Chinese delegates, who now are understood to have abandoned the notion of appealing to the council of the assembly.

The Chinese are understood to feel that the presence of military attaches in Great Britain, France and Italy at Mukden amounts to a partial realization of the Nanking government's request for a neutral commission of inquiry.

Dr. Alfred Sze and his advisors are considering the possibility of requesting the league council to ask the world court to interpret the treaties under which Japan holds rights in Manchuria. A further statement from the Japanese delegates regarding the process of the evacuation of troops in the area is expected at tomorrow's session of the council.

The assembly expects to adjourn tomorrow if there are no further disturbing Manchurian incidents.

Deferred Dry Law Vote Urged by Pettengill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP) A new representative from Indiana today suggested a way he believes the country can vote on prohibition and yet keep it out of the 1932 presidential campaigns.

Samuel B. Pettengill, democrat, Indiana, elected to the house last November, issued a statement agreeing that "prohibition is bound to get into" the next campaign. Then he proposed:

"That congress this winter adopt a resolution for the repeal or amendment of the eighteenth amendment; that the resolution provide that it be submitted for ratification or rejection by conventions in the several states called for the sole purpose of passing upon this single question, and further that the resolution provide that such conventions be chosen after January 1, 1933."

The effect, he said, will be to take the "whole question" out of the next campaign, leaving the issues strictly those of economics.

Strict Bible Interpretation Looms as Episcopal Question

Fundamentalist-Modernist Issue Threatens To Stir Church Heads Already Split on Others.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Injection of the fundamentalist-modernist fight into the convention of the Protestant Episcopal church today offered another moot question for delegations already at odds over divorce and other important religious differences.

Henry S. Booth, lay delegate from Detroit, made discussion of the strict interpretation of the Bible possible by offering a resolution in the house of deputies seeking to relieve ministers from the obligation of such a presentment of either creeds or the Bible.

The resolution was not considered kindly by those delegates hopeful of adjournment Wednesday, the tentative date already set.

Appointment of a conference committee to attempt to smooth out divorce opinion differences was a possibility cited by leaders. Creation of such a group was advocated yesterday after a committee of the house of bishops rejected a proposed matrimonial canon, approved Friday by the house of deputies, which would have established ecclesiastical courts with authority to grant communicant rights to divorced persons.

The house of bishops committee offered a substitute proposal which, agreeing in most respects with the deputies' measure, differs as to the status of remarried divorced persons.

Other matters upon which the convention has not definitely acted are numerous.

The so-called high and low churchmen are not agreed upon the use of the American Missal, mass book. A difference of opinion on the wisdom and advisability of retaining the 16th amendment in its present form has been admitted.

In addition, the Rev. G. Floyd Rogers, lay deputy, from Asheville, N. C., is pressing for consideration of his resolution, which calls upon the church to request congress to establish a federal board for the supervision of motion pictures.

The house of bishops has not acted upon a resolution introduced by Bishop G. Ashton Oldham, of Albany, N. Y., requesting that congress amend the naturalization laws in order that candidates for citizenship may not be required to "choose between God and country."

The resolution refers to the decision of the United States supreme court which denied citizenship to Professor Clyde D. McIntosh and Miss Marie Bland on the grounds they declined to express a willingness to bear arms. The deputies have already defeated a resolution of a similar nature, but couched in stronger language, which would have "repudiated" the high court.

A threatened dispute between the house of bishops and the house of deputies over election of two suffragan and one missionary bishop was dissolved after a secret meeting of the deputies, who felt they had not had proper consideration in the election of the three.

'Too Educated for Me,' Says Slayer of Wife

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—John Chorak, 36, confessed tonight, police said, that he knocked his wife unconscious, sewed her up in a sack and dropped her down a sewer manhole, where she died of suffocation.

"She was better educated than I," police quoted Chorak as saying, "and she was always making fun of me. She jeered at me and called me ignorant during a quarrel in our home on the night of June 3. She was a school teacher in the old country.

"I hit her and she fell limp on the floor. I thought maybe she was dead, but I didn't know. Anyway, I wrapped her in a blanket, sewed a sack around her, and carried her around the corner to the manhole."

INFURIATED HORSE KILLS ARKANSAN

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Sept. 27. (AP)—Pawed by an infuriated horse, Pope Alexander, 40, farmer, was killed near here this afternoon.

Alexander, formerly of Hermitage, was moving to Broken Bow, Okla., and was riding on a truck carrying two horses.

One of the horses became unruly and as Alexander attempted to control it, reared in the air and struck Alexander on the head with its forefeet. His skull was crushed.

Alexander's three small sons witnessed his death.

AMENDMENT IS FILED TO LUKE LEA'S PLEA

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 27.—(AP)—An amendment has been filed in federal court to the abatement pleas of Colonel Luke Lea and Rogers Caldwell, of Nashville, and J. Basil Ramsey, Knoxville banker, to indictments charging violation of the national banking laws in connection with the failed Holston Union National bank.

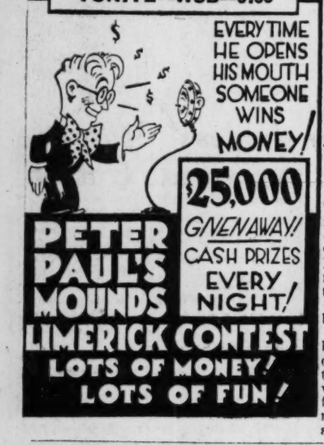

The amendment, which was allowed by Federal Judge George Taylor ten days ago after hearing arguments on the pleas, claimed that nearly three weeks was required in obtaining information in several cities and agreements between attorneys before the abatement pleas could be filed.

CAROLINIAN IS SLAIN IN MYSTERY ATTACK

Son Shot and Beaten by Unidentified Assailant Near Cross Hill.

CROSS HILL, S. C., Sept. 27.—(AP)—W. C. Rasor, 71, retired banker, was slain and his son, Jake Rasor, local merchant, shot and beaten by an unidentified assailant who attacked them in their home here last night and early today.

Rasor was beaten to death with a piece of stovewood. Officers said he probably was attacked about 10 p. m., while alone in the house.

They believed his assailant then remained in the home until shortly after midnight, awaiting the son. When the younger Rasor entered the house he was fired upon in the dark. The load from a shotgun grazed his cheek and his attacker then beat him over the head with the gunstock.

Young Rasor was taken to Greenwood, S. C., where his condition was described as serious. Physicians, however, said he had a chance to recover.

State Constable J. W. Richardson, sent here by Governor Blackwood, and Sheriff Columbus Owens, of Laurens county, investigated the case at length today but made little headway. Two negroes were arrested and later released when footprints leading from the Rasor home were found not to tally with theirs. Officers said the slayer did not wear shoes.

Bloodhounds followed the slayer's tracks from the Rasor home to a nearby highway where the trail was lost.

Officers said they believed robbery was the motive for the attack. A pocketbook and watch were taken from the elder Rasor and his pockets emptied.

REVIEWER LAUDS "STREET SCENE"

Every once in a great while there comes into our midst a motion picture play that shoulders the apologetic burden of justifying the two-dimensional stage as a form of the fine arts. Such a one is "Street Scene," running this week at Keith's Georgia theater.

Movies more amusing by far are ground out with periodic frequency. At the same theater last week was a comedy so amusing that audiences grew mutually familiar through repeated visits to the theater. Few will want to see the picture "Street Scene" twice, but still fewer will ever rest contented without seeing it once if they are aware of the rare creation they are missing.

A drama of humble metropolitan life, with New York east side tenement setting, Elmer Rice's Pulitzer prize-winning play lifts a pulsating segment from the crawling form of present-day existence and reveals it so clearly and tensely that its human realness can escape no one.

The original play was acclaimed in the dramatic world for its art, but its production was greeted with popular enthusiasm. Which means you will find in it swift, vibrating action; pathos; humor; conventional, passionate and sentimental love, and living romance.

Sylvia Sidney, Estelle Taylor, William Collier, leads in the film production, do some good, even excellent, acting. Yet it is the character roles, enacted by members of the original cast, that contribute most to the value and entertainment of the picture.

The rare quality of screen feature on the Georgia's bill earns for this portion of the week's program the entire spotlight focus. However, such exceptional offerings as "Pepito," the Spanish clown act, and Puck & White, "Show Boat" stars, on the vaudeville program cannot be overlooked. The rest of the bill is average.

The Capitol rings the bell again, and Mr. Theater-goer "gets the dolly" in the form of one of the best bits of romantic breath-taking entertainment that has been shown around here in a long time. It is one of the few pictures that absorbs rather than just entertains.

Richard Dix is a great actor to some folks, and again he ain't so hot to others. But, be that as it may, the appeal in "The Public Defender" is the plot which catches everyone's fancy who has the smallest shred of imagination. Dix is a modern knight errant, a Robin Hood who lives and breathes poetic justice all over the lot. Of course, everyone thinks that he is just a silly rich boy living on his "old man," while the businessmen of the city who get away with shady deals just within the law shudder beneath their blankets in dread of the "Reckoner," that character who sends his card and then strikes on schedule. The striking is done in the name of justice, and there are plenty of clever situations requiring quick thinking on the part of the "Reckoner" to effect his escape.

Snappy, with plenty of action and romance! Also a good kid comedy, newsreel and other features.

MURPHY FOUND GUILTY OF SCUTTLING SHIP

Sentence Will Be Pronounced This Morning at 9 O'Clock.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Captain John G. Murphy, Mobile ship owner, was declared guilty of a charge of conspiring to scuttle the steamship Rose Murphy, owned by him, by a jury in the south Alabama federal district court today. Sentence was deferred by Presiding Judge Charles B. Kennamer, of Montgomery, Ala., acting in the place of Judge R. T. Ervin, who is in New York, until tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. Attorneys for the defense indicated that an appeal would be taken to the district court of appeals. Captain Murphy was allowed his freedom until tomorrow on the same bond that he has been under during the trial.

It was the third trial for Captain Murphy, which began on Monday, September 21.

In Murphy's first trial a verdict of guilty was returned, but was set aside by Judge Ervin on a technicality. The second hearing ended in a mistrial.

Evidence in the third trial was practically the same as given at the first two hearings with the exception of testimony regarding the signature to a $6,000 note which Murphy offered at the second and third hearings. Bert C. Farrar, handwriting expert in the documents division of the treasury department at Washington, was brought here by the government to testify regarding the signature. His testimony was the only sensational feature of the third trial, the witness declaring the signature of Abner Hursey on this note was not in the same handwriting as several other signatures of Hursey which had been exhibited in the trial. Farrar testified further, that the "Abner Hursey" signature signed to the $6,000 Murphy note was written by the same person who signed several other papers as Mrs. Abner Hursey.

FLORIDA GAS TAX SUIT TO BE HEARD TODAY

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Tomorrow's oral arguments before the state supreme court on the validity of Florida's gasoline tax revenue law held the center of interest at the capital tonight.

John E. Mathews, Duval county legislator, who attacked the 1931 act as unconstitutional and obtained a temporary court order halting payment of revenue to counties under the act, was here prepared to renew his attack before the high court.

He will be assisted by several legislators representing Florida's larger counties. They joined him in opposing passage of the act in the legislature and have assisted him in the court action.

The state, represented by the attorney general's office, was ready to defend the new law and seek a supreme court order dissolving the temporary injunction. Assisting the state was an organization of 52 of Florida's smaller counties which benefit greatly under the act. The small county organization sent its officers and an array of legal talent.

The two banks will operate under the name of the Chicago Bank of Commerce starting tomorrow. Total assets of the merged bank will be approximately $13,000,000 and deposits about $10,000,000.

Capital of the Union Bank of Chicago will be retained by its stockholders, but deposits and assets will be merged with those of the Bank of Commerce.

Negotiations for the merger were completed at midnight after several days of conferences between officials.

POLICEMAN WOUNDED, MAN SLAIN IN DUEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—In a pistol fight which broke up a card game in the basement of an upper East Side apartment house today, Patrolman Charles Kleine, shot and killed Edward Franklin, 48, the building superintendent, and was himself seriously wounded.

Police said Franklin and his wife and three others were playing cards when a dispute arose over cheating. The policeman was called to settle the argument.

Kleine said when he arrived the superintendent held the others at bay with a revolver, which he refused to surrender, opening fire and hitting the policeman.

TWO FLORIDA OFFICERS FACE NEW CHARGES

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Two of four Dade county constables indicted some time ago on various charges of misfeasance or malfeasance in office were under $1,000 additional bond today on two new charges by a Dade county grand jury.

S. D. Calloway, Miami, was named in a new indictment on two counts of perjury in connection with a liquor raid. H. M. Cook, Homestead, was charged with agreeing to accept money from a bootlegger for protection against arrest.

The two constables and George Mehan, and A. C. Daniels, both of Miami, will go on trial tomorrow on other charges.

MOSES' BLOC APPEAL DRAWS WALSH ATTACK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The recent suggestion of Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, for a New England bloc in the senate drew a retort today from Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, that the people of that section are "persistent beggars for tariff favors."

Speaking before the Massachusetts Co-operative Bankers' League, Senator Moses urged New England investors to organize and back such a bloc to protect their millions of dollars in investments and added that he wondered why "an impudent minority in congress make these investors take it lying down."

U. S. Experts Gather Data For Hoover-Laval Parleys

Moyle, Allen Await Favorable Weather

SEATTLE, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, California aviators and unsuccessful trans-Pacific non-stop fliers, tonight were reported grounded at Fairbanks, Alaska, awaiting favorable weather before attempting a Fairbanks-Tacoma hop.

Richard Fenton, business manager of the flight, said Moyle had cabled the weather was very unfavorable and that the Californians would wait for it to clear up.

They flew to Fairbanks Friday from Solomon Beach, near Nome, being forced down by adverse air conditions.

Washington Officials Keenly Interested in Economic Questions Under Consideration in Berlin.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—President Hoover is getting his official house in order so he can talk over the world's most pressing problems with a dark-mustached Frenchman who has a reputation for frankness.

The foreign visitor is Premier Laval. In Berlin now, he is expected in this country in little more than three weeks.

Already state department experts are assembling reams of data on international problems—including disarmament—likely to be discussed. These should be helpful when the two notables try to bring closer together the positions of their governments on world economics.

The biggest point of difference in the past has been how far politics should enter into the realm of business. The United States, with no particular worry about her borders, has held that economics should be settled as economics. France, having been invaded twice in 50 years, leans heavily on tried political principals.

Despite the difference in attitudes, the United States and France have controlled the bulk of the world's gold supply for more than a year. Mr. Hoover is aware of the reasons for the French position that her borders must be protected before there can be talk of international action. He remarked during the reparations negotiations that if the United States only 13 years ago had faced Germans for four years in trenches extending from Baltimore to Buffalo the position in America might be different.

Mr. Hoover feels, however, there is a common meeting ground on which France and the United States can conduct future discussions.

Officials here are keenly interested in the Berlin conference since the same economic questions under consideration there promise to figure largely in the discussions of Premier Laval and the president. Besides the usual press reports, the government watchers also will have confidential dispatches from Ambassador Sackett to the state department.

Emory Professor Is Seeking Degree On Harvard Award

Paul E. Bryan, professor in the Lamar Law school at Emory University, is in Cambridge, Mass., where he will undertake to obtain his doctor of jurisprudence degree, with the aid of the Sidney Thompson Fairchild fellowship, which was awarded to him in June of this year.

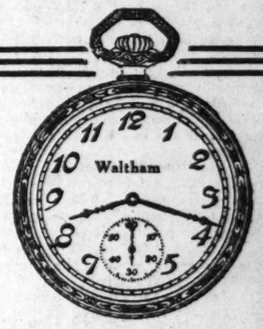

A graduate of Emory in 1907, he went to Yale University and obtained his master's and his LL.B. degrees during the same three-year term, a feat seldom attempted, finishing his work there in 1916. In 1916, shortly after Mr. Bryan left Yale, the Lamar Law school was founded, and he accepted a position as a professor there.

The Fairchild fellowship is awarded only to professors of law or men in similar work, and only to men of exceptional promise. Mr. Bryan is the second member of the Emory faculty to have obtained the award, the first having been Dr. Charles J. Hilkey, dean of the law school. While the dean was in Cambridge, in 1929 and 1930, working toward his degree Mr. Bryan was acting dean of the Lamar Law school, having previously served in that capacity in 1924 and 1925.

Some time ago Mr. Bryan was offered the post of dean in a prominent southern school of law, but declined the offer in order to remain in Atlanta and with Emory. He was at one time exchange professor at the Stettin-Munster school in Germany, and studied at Chicago University and at Columbia. He is expected to return to Atlanta when he has been awarded his degree at Harvard.

CONFERENCE SPLIT IS BELIEVED ASSURED

Ralph McGill's Football Review

Editor's Note: This is another of a series of articles by Ralph McGill, sports editor of The Constitution, dealing with the prospects of Southern conference football teams for the coming season. He is now on a tour of conference football camps, and his daily stories will give Constitution readers first-hand "dope" on the various teams.

'Clipper' Smith Has Tough, Hustling Team At N. C. State That Will Be Hard To Beat

Notre Dame's latest contribution to the Southern conference coaching staff, John P. (Clipper) Smith, seems to be having the success that comes with hard work generously applied.

The new head coach at North Carolina State University works at a high pitch and he carries his men along with him. No football squad in the conference has worked as hard and as long as the Wolfpack from Raleigh.

It was just last Wednesday that the Pack stopped working out twice per day. And on Saturday night they beat out the Davidson eleven, always tough, by scoring three touchdowns in a game they were supposed to lose.

Florida, North Carolina and others on the Wolfpack schedule had best look to their laurels. The Pack is on the way back.

It was at a night workout just before the Davidson game that your correspondent managed to get past the gates and into the lighted field where the Pack was running. And were they running?

One of the freshmen pointed out the new coach. What I saw was a young fellow in old baseball pants, football shoes, sweat shirt and baseball cap. He looked no larger than the smallest boys, and he was lots smaller than some of his players.

He was watching some of the men go through the Notre Dame shift which evolved into a forward pass. It didn't go right. He leaped into the passer's position, and went through the play. Then he watched it again

The Omnipresent Clipper

From there he went to the line. He showed a guard something and then had a whirl at the ends. Meanwhile his assistant, Frank Reese, another Notre Dame man, was busy with another squad.

Smith bobbed about up and down the field, and the next time he was stationary enough to be seen he was going down under passes to show the defense how to break them up.

At Notre Dame, a few years ago, he was a sensation at guard. He was little, but he was a little tough, too, as he told Rockne when that worthy commented on the fact.

He played with a dynamic restlessness that upset his opponents. And he has never lost that feverish drive.

After practice that evening Smith appeared, still tense.

"I can't relax, I guess," he said. "From the time football starts until it is over, my nerves are as tight as a fiddle string. I can't take it lightly"

Face Tremendous Task

Smith and Reese have a tremendous task at State. For three years now the Wolfpack has been out of the running. Last season saw the coach resign. The wonder was that the Pack carried over any spirit this fall.

It is there, though. Smith has re-created it. His men follow him blindly and at a pace almost equal to his own. No one can be around him and be half-hearted about anything. Given time to carry out his system of development, he will make the State team one of the real contenders in southrn play.

There are some players on the Wolfpack team who will be heard of before the season is half gone. It would not be surprising to find some of them on the all-southern team when it is selected this winter.

Sam Geruneau, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian of heroic proportions, is at an end. Last season Geruneau was a half-hearted fullback. This fall he is an Indian on the warpath at end. Smith has him going. He weighs 195 pounds and is pretty sure to be one of the better ends in the south.

Charley Cobb, the left tackle, is a gentle little chap weighing 205 pounds. He was one of the south's best tackles last season, but, due to the disorganization at Raleigh, he was generally overlooked. He tore a Florida line up badly, and will tear up quite a few more this fall.

Another Watch Charm Guard

Willie Duke, 165-pound guard, is the lightest man in the line. He is fast and a hard fighter. Red Epsey, 180-pound center, another junior, is also rated as one of the best players in the Carolinas.

Romeo LeFort, and there's a name for you, isn't any Romeo at all in that football game. One probably feels as if he had been hit by that balcony instead when LaFort gets through.

Arthur Wilson, 196-pound tackle, and Bob Gleason, 175-pound end, fill out the line.

The backfield is made up largely of sophomores, three of them having won places there. But they are splendid prospects. The State freshmen last season won the state title.

Bob McQuage, 180-pound quarter, is another good sophomore. Mope Cumiskey, 185 pounds, is the fullback from the sophomore class. Dick Dellinger, at left half, is the lone senior.

That team has weight, enough experience and more than enough spirit. The reserves are good ones. And, despite the fact that there are just the two conference coaches, the State team is going to be a real factor this fall; just another one of those tough teams that will cause plenty of trouble.

Wynne's Men Show Much Improvement

By Jimmy Jones.

After seeing those Auburn Tigers in action, one could not afford to wax overenthuiastic for it is not a powerful team, but it could be stated conservatively that the Plainsmen of 1931 are decidedly better than the Plainsmen of 1930.

Chet Wynne's game little eleven is surrounded on every side by conference giants who will war over the title on the field, and let their alumni settle the issue in the hotel lobbies.

Auburn is not likely to figure in any titular disputes, but it is a fairly good guess to say that she will win more football games than any Auburn team of the last five years.

This year's Wynne eleven represents a radical departure from the winning combinations of Mike Donahue's day. One scans the present layout and sees a paucity of the brawn and beef that composed those old Auburn lines.

The present Tiger forwards average only 176 from end to end. They will be the Mickey Walkers of the conference, pitted against the Carneras represented by some of the other teams. But the Auburn line is alert, being well schooled to watch for fumbles and misplays, just as is any Notre Dame coached team.

Recovered fumbles led directly to two of Auburn's touchdowns against Birmingham-Southern in Montgomery Friday night. On the second, Lind Hatfield had broken through and was headed through the opposing secondary when he dropped the ball. It oozed through the hands of two Birmingham-Southern backs but Henry Chambless, Tiger guard, charged past both and pounced on it just 4 yards from Southern's goal. Jimmy Hitchcock took it across.

"RADIO" ARIAIL!

David Ariail (an end whom we're terribly afraid someone will dub "Radio" Ariail before the season is over) recovered a fumble that led to Auburn's first touchdown. And on the fourth touchdown, Chatty Davidson, the quarterback, latched onto a crippled punt that gave his team the

YANKEES POUND ATHLETIC ACES IN FINAL SALVO

Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg Punished; Gehrig Hits Homer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Yankees ended the season today by walloping a trio of the Athletics' star pitchers for 20 hits to win by a score of 13 to 1.

Lefty Grove started and was shelled for five runs and eight hits to lose his fourth game of the season. It was his first defeat this year by the Yankees. He ended the season with 31 victories to attain the highest percentage of a modern pitcher with a mark of .886. Joe Wood, of Boston, had .872 in 1912, winning 34 and losing 5.

Earnshaw and Walberg followed Grove and they were treated just as roughly by the Yankee sluggers.

Lou Gehrig hit his 46th homer to tie Babe Ruth for the season. Dickey and Lazzeri each made four hits to lead the Yankee attack, the latter driving in four runs.

INDIANS IN FOURTH.

Cleveland and Detroit closed the American league season with the Indians pounding two Detroit pitchers for 14 hits and an 8-to-5 victory. Cleveland finished in fourth place again this year, about two games over the .500 mark, and took the series from Detroit with 13 victories and 9 defeats.

Senator rookies and reserves had their fling today as Washington lost the final game of the season to Boston, 4-2. Andrus replaced the veteran Bluege at third base; Hayes, utility regular, played part of the game at shortstop instead of Cronin, and Bolton caught.

Ad Liska, ailing Senator hurler, started but was driven from the mound after three innings, being succeeded by Masters. Liska had not been in uniform since early in the season.

The St. Louis Browns won both ends of a double-header from the last-place Chicago White Sox here today to finish in fifth place. The scores were 10 to 8 and 2 to 1. Slugging featured the first game, but Weiland, of the visitors, and Blaeholder, of the Browns, pitched effectively in the nightcap.

Jolley, of the White Sox, hit a homer in the opening game.

EVEN ON SEASON.

The Robins finished in a tie with the Giants on the interborough series here, 10 victories to 10 lost, when darkness halted the second game of a season-closing double-header. The Robins won the first game, 12 to 3.

Fitzsimmons was batted out of the box in the third inning of the first contest when the Robins launched an eight-run rally. Clark pitched steady ball throughout to finish far in front.

The Giants led in the second game, 6 to 1, and had knocked Van Mungo out of the box when darkness prevented further play in the first half of the fourth inning.

CARDS TAKE TWO.

The St. Louis Cardinals, National league champions, closed the season with a double victory over the Reds, 6 to 2, and 5 to 3, to make it 20 victories out of the 22 games with the Reds this year. Bottomley made four hits out of eight times up in the double bill, including a home run in the first game with one on base. The Reds broke their own double-play record of 194, made in 1928, when they completed three in the second game, to run this year's total to 195.

The Chicago Cubs closed their unsuccessful season by taking both ends of a double-header from the Pirates, 3 to 1 and 8 to 4, today. Root and Malone were the winning hurlers, besting Meine and Spencer.

Home runs won for the Bruins in both games. Trailing in the nightcap by two runs, the Cubs rallied in the seventh to score six times. Barton hit a home run with the bases full. Earlier in the game Dan Taylor had hit his second of the afternoon.

The hitting of Dan Taylor gave the Cubs victory in the first contest. With the bases full and two out in the first inning, he beat out a hit past Traynor to score Cuyler. In the third inning Danny hit a home run over the right-field fence to provide the Bruins with their winning margin. The other run off Meine was a homer by Grimm in the fifth.

The Phillies took over undisputed possession of sixth place by splitting a double-header with the Braves today, 5 to 3 and 12 to 2, in the season's finale.

Umpires Selected For World Series

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(UP)—William J. ("Bill") Klem and Albert ("Dolly") Stark have been selected from the National league umpiring staff to work in the world series between the Philadelphia Athletics and St. Louis Cardinals, John Heydler, president of the league, announced tonight.

At the same time Heydler announced that Umpires Ernest Quigley and George Magerkurth would officiate at the Chicago city series between the White Sox and the Cubs.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(UP)—President William Harridge, of the American league, today announced the appointment of R. F. Nallin and W. A. McGowan as umpires for the world series, and C. B. Owens and George Hildzbrand as umpires for the Chicago city series.

VICTORY BRINGS LAVAL ELEVEN HIGHER RATING

Defeat of Duke Impressive; Cavaliers, Cadets Suffer in Upsets.

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

South Carolina today has placed itself among Southern conference football favorites following its 7-0 victory over Duke University Saturday.

While Tulane, co-champion with Alabama last year, was trouncing Mississippi in the only other intra-conference engagement, Billy Laval's Gamecocks discarded their crazy-quilt formations and other hocus-pocus plays to win an orthodox football game from the Wallace Wade-coached Duke eleven.

Earl Clark, a sophomore halfback, scored the winning touchdown in the second period and kept the Blue Devils guessing all afternoon.

Although Carolina is not ranked as high as Georgia, Tulane, Vanderbilt and some of the favorites, its schedule gives it a chance to finish near the top. The Gamecocks later play Georgia Tech, Clemson, Louisiana State, Florida, N. C. State and Auburn, none of which appeared stronger in pre-season workouts than did Duke.

OLE MISS WEAKENS.

Mississippi gave Tulane a good tussle for three periods, but the Greenies broke away in the last quarter to roll up a 31-0 score and keep clean their record of no Southern defeats since 1928.

Two upsets—Richmond's 7-0 triumph over V. M. I. and Randolph-Macon's 7-7 tie with Virginia—were recorded in the upper section, but the score sheets ran true to form in other districts.

Leon Long, plucked from the substitute roll to play fullback, led Alabama's 42-6 charge against Howard by counting three touchdowns. North Carolina State surprised its followers in its opening contest with an 18-7 win over Davidson.

Vanderbilt had no trouble defeating Western Kentucky, 52-6; Tennessee swamped Maryville, 33-0, and Jimmy DeHart's new system worked well at Washington and Lee with a 32-0 decision over Hampden-Sidney.

OLD LINERS WIN.

Maryland beat Washington College, 12-0; V. P. I. won from King, 33-0; Sewanee turned back Tennessee Tech, 24-7, and North Carolina defeated Wake Forest, 37-0. Peacock, a substitute quarterback, furnished the thrill in this contest with an 85-yard touchdown run from kickoff.

The conference lost its first intersectional game as Texas Christian scored a 3-0 field goal verdict over Louisiana State.

Chattanooga, 1928 and 1929 Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association champion, revealed great strength in its 12-7 win over Oglethorpe, while Mercer hung up its second S. I. A. A. victory with a 26-0 decision over The Citadel. Centenary trampled Louisiana Normal, 23-2; Southwestern beat Delta State, 32-0, and Spring Hill whipped Marion, 53-0.

In Friday's games, Auburn won from Birmingham-Southern, 24-6, and Clemson was held to a scoreless tie by Presbyterian.

TEST FOR VANDY.

The intra-conference race starts in earnest next Saturday with eight games arranged, topped by Vanderbilt's meeting with North Carolina, Georgia's engagement with V. P. I., and South Carolina's game with Georgia Tech.

Other contests bring together Tennessee and Clemson, Florida and N. C. State, Maryland and Virginia, Duke and V. M. I. and Alabama and Mississippi.

Tulane goes into the southwest to play Texas A. & M.; Louisiana College journeys to Mexico City to meet the University of Mexico, and Oglethorpe engages Duquesne, at Pittsburgh, in intersectional frays.

Other games include Mississippi A. & M. and Mississippi College, Sewanee and Southwestern, Louisiana State and Spring Hill, Washington and Lee and Davidson, Kentucky and Maryville, William and Mary and Navy, Loyola and Chattanooga, Wofford and Birmingham-Southern, Mississippi Teachers and Millsaps, Centre and Western Kentucky, Erskine and The Citadel and Mercer and Stetson.

Baush Sets New Pentathlon Mark

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Jim Bausch, former football star for the University of Kansas, set a new American record in winning the national pentathlon championship here today. Bausch's winning point total was 3776.585 as compared with the record of 3462.20 set last year by Barney Berlinger, of Penn.

Second place went to George T. Cronin, of the New York A. C., with 3376.99 points and third to Daniel Sherman, unattached, 2857.60.

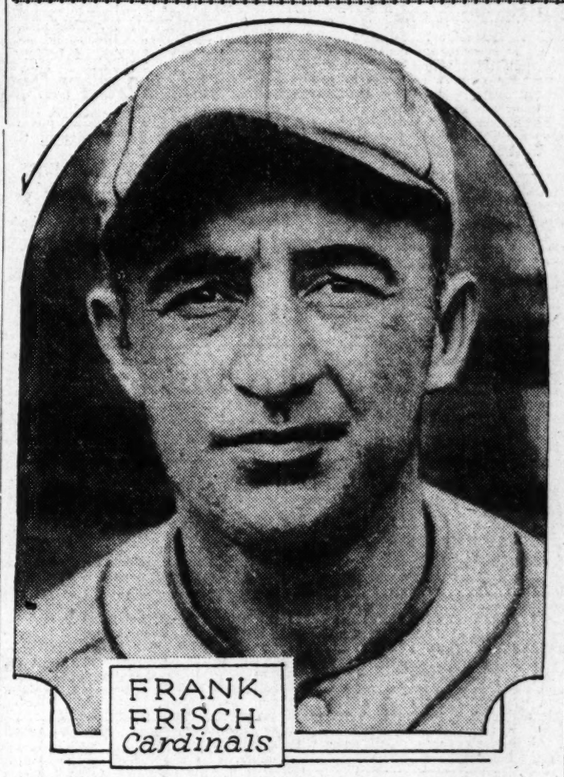

Great Dean Does Turn for Grocers

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—(UP)—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, ace righthander of the Texas league Houston Buffs and as much talked of as any hurler in the minor leagues, showed a packed grandstand of fans here today why he was rated as the outstanding pitcher of the Texas league.

On the mound for the Gulotta Grocers, local semi-pro baseball club, Dean allowed two bingles in seven innings and struck out seven batsmen. The Gulottas shut out the LaFitte Pirates, 8-0. Joe Martina, former major league moundsman, relieved Dean in the eighth frame and allowed one hit in two stanzas.

Only one Pirate player reached second base while Dean was doing the twirling for a team which Jake Atz was coaching. The record-setter of the Texas league came to New Orleans today by airplane for the game.

Still the Flash

Frankie Frisch, the famous Fordham Flash and hero of more than one world series as a Giant and Cardinal, has batted .313 during the current season. His team will have a batting edge at second base over the Athletics in the forthcoming baseball classic as Max Bishop, Connie Mack's keystoner, is hitting .294, a matter of 19 points below him. Frisch, a finished performer at second, also has driven in almost three times as many runs as Bishop.

Cardinal Infield Has Edge Over Mackmen

By Gayle Talbot.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—If the impending world's series were to be decided on the merits of the contending infields, the St. Louis Cardinals probably would be rated as 7-to-5 favorites, which is precisely the opposite of the latest series quotations.

The National league champions boast an obvious bulge over the Athletics in their inner works. Much of their punch is there. In Jim Bottomley at first, Frankie Frisch at second, Charley Gelbert at shortstop and Sparky Adams at third, they have one of the hardest-hitting, most efficient infields in the game.

Philadelphia's inner quartet, even with the vaunted Jimmy Foxx at first base, is not a match for Gabby Street's combination.

Foxx, a powerful factor in the last world's series, has experienced an off year at bat, failing to hit .300. Max Bishop, pepper box of the champions' infield, has hit almost 20 points below his rival at second base, the veteran Frankie Frisch. Joe Boley, crippled and out much of the time, has hit more than 50 points under Gelbert. Jimmy Dykes, at third base, has hit only .268 for the year, compared to .297 for Adams, the leading two-base hitter of the National league.

The Cardinals' four regular infielders, in other words, have compiled a combined average of .308, compared to a .272 average set by their American league rivals. Then, too, it must be taken into account that the Cardinals' flashy four have been hitting at the National league ball, which is not the pellet it used to be.

In fielding, the Athletic inner defense appears to have a slight edge, leading in three out of four positions. Foxx, with the remarkable average of .996, has proved steadier than Bottomley, with .987. Bishop, with .986, shades Frisch with .974, and Dykes, with a .976 average at third base, has an advantage over Adams, with .961. Gelbert, however, has proved himself a more dependable shortfielder than either Boley or Dibrell Williams, the youngster who filled in for him while he was nursing numerous injuries this season. Gelbert, the hero of the 1930 series, has posted a fielding average of .962, compared to .960 for Boley and .904 for Williams.

One of the most interesting features of the big series promises to be the battle between Foxx and Bottomley. Although he has hit far below "Sunny Jim" this year, Foxx has proved he can hit when the championship is at stake, while Bottomley perhaps was the most tragic figure to emerge from the last series.

It is at shortstop that the Cardinals promise to have the biggest margin. Gelbert was the hitting sensation in the 1930 series, and he has proved this year there was nothing accidental about it.

Boley, on the other hand, has found it difficult to stay in the game and there is a chance that Williams will be in there when the lineups are announced Thursday at St. Louis.

Following are the season's records of the opposing infields:

PAUL DERRINGER TO HURL OPENER

Enquirer Says Youngster Will Face George Earnshaw Thursday.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Enquirer says Manager Gabby Street, of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced tonight that Paul Derringer, sensational young right-hander, would pitch the opening game of the world's series against the Philadelphia Athletics in St. Louis Thursday.

The Enquirer says "Wild Bill" Hallahan, left-hander, is to pitch the second game the following day and that what happens later will depend upon the success or lack of success of these two hurlers.

Derringer, who joined the Cards only last spring, won 18 games this year, including a victory over the Reds here today, and lost eight.

Vines Beats Perry For Coast Crown

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Ellsworth Vines, University of Southern California sophomore, made an impressive comeback here today to defeat Frederick Perry, English Davis cup player, and retained his Pacific southwest tennis title by scores of 8-10, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

The national singles champion had difficulty in getting his placements and service functioning properly in the first three sets. He was guilty of 28 double faults, but through these sets he wore down the resistance of Perry, and in the deciding set walked away with the match in decisive fashion.

Vines' service was working beautifully in the latter part of the fourth set and again in the match set with Perry making few adequate returns.

The victory gave Vines his 13th championship of the year. Thirty-five thousand spectators, a capacity crowd, cheered as he won.

Mrs. L. A. Harper, of Oakland, No. 1 ranking player of the country, defeated Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, to win the women's singles championship. This title was held last year by Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of Los Angeles, who was eliminated in the third round.

'BIG TEN' GROUP RECOMMENDED AT MEET HERE

Ruling Is Sought On Austie Downs

Austie Downs' eligibility will be decided by the Southern Conference executive committee at its session this morning, it was learned Sunday night.

The case of the Georgia captain was presented by Dr. S. V. Sanford, of the University of Georgia, who asked for a ruling in the case of the young captain, one of the south's most brilliant players. Georgia, unwilling that there should be any question, asked for the examination.

Downs' case hinges on whether or not his five-year period, the period allowed for the completion of one year of freshman and three years of varsity competition, has expired.

By Ralph McGill.

Eight representatives of the Southern conference, an organization governing athletic competition in 23 southern universities, voted Sunday night at a meeting in Atlanta to recommend to their respective faculties that a new conference of 10 members be formed.

Two additional members will be invited to join, it was learned from unimpeachable authority. An official statement will be made today.

The new "Big Ten" made its recommendation on the grounds that they desired uniform entrance and eligibility requirements. This was the chief reason for the move, it was learned. Faculty acceptance of the recommendation is thought to be a mere formality.

Representatives of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Auburn, Florida, Tulane, Kentucky and North Carolina were present at the meeting and drew up the history-making document. The meeting preceded one by the Southern conference executive committee, the latter being the regular fall meeting.

THIRD BIG MOVE.

This is the third important move in southern athletics, the first being the organization of the S. I. A. A. more than a score of years ago.

In 1920 the first move, led by Dr. S. V. Sanford, of Georgia, was made to form the present Southern conference. It was formally organized in 1921 at Atlanta.

The new organization, which will be a "Big Ten," will have strict uniform eligibility requirements, something that is lacking in the present unwieldy organization of 23 southern universities. It is a move which has been needed for some years and one which has been agitated for the past four years.

PROVISIONS.

The official statement, which will be released today, will say, in substance:

That the eight representatives have felt the need of such an organization for some time.

That each student entering a member university shall have 15 entrance units, three of which may be vocational.

That each athlete must pass enough work to graduate, which will be equivalent to three-fourths of his work.

That the coaches shall appoint a committee which will draw up rules governing migration, summer baseball, transfers, proselyting and other phases of athletics requiring regulation.

The move to create a new athletic body came with surprising suddenness. It was the subject of a private meeting, similar to that held Sunday night, last winter at Chapel Hill, N. C. Nothing was done.

CAME AS SURPRISE.

It was thought that the move was assured for the winter meeting scheduled for December at New Orleans, but it was not anticipated this early.

It was not generally understood that eligibility requirements were not the same throughout the Southern conference. Entrance requirements were uniform but many institutions had eligibility requirements which were much stricter than those in force at other institutions. This created an unfair basis of competition, and some such move was inevitable.

The new step will not affect present football contracts, but in the future the schedules will be confined to the Big Ten except for intersectional games, it is thought.

The executive committee will continue its meeting today. It has no connection at all with the meeting of the eight representatives who recommended the new organization.

Cadet Tennis Team Meets Darlington

Georgia Military Academy and Darlington school, of Rome, will play a tennis match at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the G. M. A. courts. It is the first tennis match of the present school term, and opens the way for another sport to be added to the fall term.

Darlington had one of the best tennis teams in prep circles last year, and although several of the stars were lost by graduation last June, their places have been taken by capable players.

The Boulware brothers will lead the Cadets this afternoon.

Georgia Football Teams Start Work for Saturday Contests

Excited Over Perfect Game, Atlanta Boy Tells of Tiger Contract

While the Yankees were making merry with the best offerings of Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg, Athletic pitching aces, Sunday and Bucky Harris groaned as Cleveland, mocking the best efforts of the Detroit moundsmen, took the closing game of a disastrous season for the Tigers, Hugh Casey, 17, a native Atlanta boy and a member of the Detroit team, turned in a no-hit, no-run game for Almand Park against the Mohawks at Almand Park.

My, my! What Bucky Harris would have given for that performance yesterday. Bucky needs pitchers like baby needs a new pair of shoes, and there was Cleveland slamming two Detroit pitchers for 14 hits, while Mohawk batters, 13 of them, were taking three and stamping back to the bench in disgust. And what is more, Casey aided his own cause with two hits, one a double.

Hugh was signed by the Detroit team on September 1, following offers by the St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago Cubs and Little Rock, and will report next spring to Evansville, Ind., in the Three-I league, to whom he has been farmed by the Tigers, he told The Constitution last night.

The youthful pitching sensation had carefully guarded the fact of his signing previous to yesterday's game, when, enthused by his splendid pitching feat, he told all. The boys with whom he has been playing for several years greeted the news with open admiration. For, after all, Casey is only 17, and the perspective of his fellow players did not at once include a major league career.

Frank Moffett, Detroit coach, was in Atlanta ever on the lookout for major league talent when his attention was drawn to Casey, who has a fast ball that travels down the lane like a greased streak. After Moffett had seen Casey work he lost no time in notifying his bosses of his discovery.

THREE TIGER CUBS.

Casey will join two other Atlanta boys as members of the Tigers—Joyner White, an outfielder, and Nolen Richardson, a third-baseman, who has been playing regularly for the past few weeks.

The youthful right-hander began his career four years ago playing for the North Side Terriers and since then, in addition to the Terriers, has played for Westminster in the Sunday school league, for Gordon St., for Tubby Walton, rotund developer of star players, and for Rache Bell, Atlanta manager of amateur teams, to whom Casey gives much credit for his early training.

Casey will turn 18 on October 14, truly a prodigy of the diamond and a glowing tribute to the efforts of those sportsmen—Walton, Bell, Elberfield, et al.—who devote their spare time to the instruction of young players seeking an expression of their baseball talents.

ANOTHER PROSPECT.

Dan Landers, 19, also a native Atlanta boy, who throws that baseball from the portside, will be given a tryout with Little Rock in the spring. Landers, a strapping six-footer, pitched for Hapeville and Egan Park, champions of the Palmetto league, and also earned his letter at Emory University.

Landers threw a few against Little Rock when the team was here during the season, and the way he breezed them by the batters gained the particular interest of Kid Elberfield, Little Rock coach and scout.

FORT POLOISTS SQUARE SERIES

Guardsmen, Off Hitting Form, Beaten in Fourth Game, 10-3.

The Fort McPherson polo team swamped the Governor's Horse Guard team, 10-3, Sunday afternoon at Fort McPherson in the fourth game of their fall series for the city championship title. This evens the series at two-all with the fifth game to be played next Sunday.

With Lieutenant Biddle in his best scoring form and with Lieutenant Baker taking care of most Guard threats, the Fort was never in danger of losing the game. The avalanche began in the first period when, without a moment's hesitation, the Fort Mac team stepped out with three goals.

The Horse Guards rallied in the second chukker and held the regular army team to no score, while Williamson scored for the Guards on a difficult angle shot. However, in the third period, Fort Mac repeated its first-period performance of making three goals, and from this time on were well in the clear.

Fort McPherson undoubtedly got the breaks of the game, and was also given a great advantage by the missing of many easy shots by the Guardsmen, who were woefully off form in hitting, not having had a single scrimmage during the past week. The Fort McPherson plays were clicking to perfection.

Biddle and Baker were the outstanding players for the Fort, while Love was the most consistent performer for the Horse Guards.

By Jimmy Jones.

Now that the first Saturday of heavy skirmishing has revealed that the new fotoball fumbles just as easily and inopportunely as the old one, the situation in Georgia's own immediate gridiron family finds the various teams looking at their next battles as seriously as any coach could desire.

The thermometer, which has been acting rather queerly for the time of year, finally came down to reason and the athletes will slip into their uniforms with more relish for this afternoon's workouts.

Here in Atlanta, Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets are launching their final week of practice for their opener with South Carolina at Grant field Saturday. Monk Neblett, the aggressive center, has been named as the 1931 leader of the Engineers, being the third pivot man to be so honored in four years. Peter Pund in 1928 and Harold Rusk in 1929 were the other centers to wear the toga. Roy MacArthur, quarterback, and Sid Williams, end, will act jointly as alternate captains.

CLARY IS THREAT.

The Gamecocks are coming to town with a halfback named Earl Clary occupying the perch of head rooster. There are no feathers on Clary's legs but apparently there are wings on his heels, judging by the way he flitted through the Duke Blue Devils' defense at Columbia Saturday. In fact, Clary was more diabolical than any of the opposition and no doubt the Blue Devils were bluer than ever when they failed to overcome Mr. Clary's touchdown.

The Tech team, although young and untried, will have the usual priority of sophomores. Unworried about any prestige to defend, they can shoot the works from the start.

Mack Tharpe and Bobby Dodd returned from Columbia with first-hand news of the Gamecocks yesterday and today the Jackets will hear what they have to say of Clary and the others.

BULLDOGS VERSUS GOBBLERS.

The Georgia Bulldogs, over Athens way, are wheeling their artillery into position for the V. P. I. Gobblers. Yale scouts will be in the press box with pencils poised Saturday to see what they can diagram on Harry Mehre's men. The Georgians also are eager to see what the Bulldogs look like as they have their hardest schedule to cope with this year.

Georgia is picked to win this one, but V. P. I. will have her followers. The alumni of this section plan to attend the game in a body to cheer for the Gobblers.

With Buster Mott, Jack Roberts and the other offensive cogs ready to go, the Bulldogs undoubtedly are favorites. Austie Downs, the field general, will be watched closely by persons who wish to see if that sprained arm is O. K.

GARRISON FINISH.

Oglethorpe's Stormy Petrels had a football game won from Chattanooga Saturday when Frank Anderson drop-kicked that extra point over the cross-bar, but unfortunately there was a fourth quarter to be played. The Moccasins got their offense clicking and pushed over a touchdown to win out, 12-7, on one of these twilight finishes that Richard Dix pulls in the movies.

A stubborn Chattanooga line clogged Oglethorpe's running attack with arms and shoulders, so Harry Robertson can be counted on to get right after his blockers today. The Petrels will have to leave Wednesday as they have a Friday night game with Elmer Layden's Duquesne team in Pittsburgh. The latter lost a close 14-6 battle to West Virginia Saturday.

BEARS IN FORM.

Mercer's Bears, fresh from their second straight S. I. A. A. contest, are back in Macon after a 26-to-0 victory over Johnny Floyd's Citadel eleven Saturday at Charleston. Lake Russell's team plays the Stetson Hatters Saturday at home, preparatory to an invasion of Kentucky the following week, where Centre will be played at Danville.

The Bears, handicapped by lack of reserve backs last year, have a fine pair of relief men in Jake Trommerhauser, star of the Erskine victory, and Ernie Zinowsky, a 19-year-old sophomore who runs something like Stumpy Thomason. Pinky Walden, now a married man, seems to be up to his last year's form, as he accounted for two of the touchdowns against The Citadel.

These Tigers are truly ball hawks and seem to realize that any advantage they hold will lie in their alertness. A blocked punt or a recovered fumble may be instrumental in more than one Tiger victory.

Chet Wynne, himself, was displeased with his team's blocking. The Tigers were stopped repeatedly in midfield by their foes and had to kick. Had it not been for that ability to capitalize on Southern's mistakes, the score might have been very close indeed.

HARD SYSTEM.

The Auburn team, if it masters the Notre Dame system in two years, will be doing much better than the average team. The Tigers apparently have not completely mastered it yet and they're still somewhat short on weight and reserves, but the backfield seems to be much better off than it was last year.

Wynne sent in at least three backs that served well enough as relief men for the Hitchcock-Hatfield-Brown combination. Casey Kimbrell, a rugged, hard-running boy, can kick and pass. Phipps is another fine passer, while Rogers can be counted on to help some, also.

The play of the Tiger tackles, Prim and Bush, was a little disappointing in that Birmingham-Southern game. Both men are capable of vastly better things.

SPIRIT BOOSTED.

The Tigers, by winning their opener, did much better than they have been doing as a rule. They usually lose the first and the last game, too, but in 1930 they wound up by licking South Carolina. It is the writer's belief that that win over Birmingham-Southern will get Auburn off on the right foot.

The Tigers probably will lose to Wisconsin October 10, although Chet Wynne has around two weeks to get ready for the game. Then comes Tech here on October 17 and that should be a close contest, by the way.

The Wynne-jammers play Florida at Jacksonville October 24; Spring Hill at Auburn October 31; Tulane at Montgomery November 7; Sewanee at Birmingham November 14; Georgia at Columbus November 21 and South Carolina at Montgomery November 26.

Auburn will not greatly impress you at first sight but she will show you a nifty pair of backs in Hitchcock and Hatfield. Hitchcock would be a threat on any team; a fine guard in young Chambless, and a very capable pair of ends in Grant and Ariail. Holmes, the big sophomore tackle, did not show much Friday night, but then it was his first game.

The Big Show.

The big show is on again this week, and, for one concentrated week, the big show of American sport is the world series. It catches and holds the attention of every big city and every small hamlet from San Francisco to Boston, from Seattle to Miami, from Vermont to Texas.

And this happens to be one of the most interesting and exciting of all the big shows of baseball, because it brings together two great teams, both equipped to play every part of the game.

On the one side is a team that has won three pennants and two world series in a row—Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics. On the other side, the big show has the St. Louis Cardinals, who won the National league pennant last year, gave the Athletics a much harder battle than the score shows, and then came back in the pennant race to repeat by an even more decisive margin.

It is something to know that the two best will be out there battling, beyond any possibility of a fluke entry. They stand alone. And the elements of baseball are such that almost anything can happen.

A Long Way Back.

Much of my confidence in the so-called dope of the game was shattered 17 years ago. I still recall the night I dropped in to see the late George Stallings, then manager of the Boston Braves.

The Athletics had won their fourth pennant in five years. They had Bender, Coombs and Plank. They had McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. They were looked on as the invincibles. Yet that night Stallings told me his Braves would either win four straight games or make it four out of five.

I had the feeling that I was being kidded, spoofed or joshed.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because," he said. "Rudolph, Tyler and James will stop them cold. We are coming and they are going. It can't be any other way."

And that was the year the Braves won four straight and broke up one of the great ball clubs of all time. It was one of the greatest shocks baseball has ever known, but it also proved what can happen when one club gets the jump.

Matching Up.

This series matches up in an unusual way. The Athletics have Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg, with Hoyt in reserve.

To match these the Cardinals have Derringer, Grimes and Hallahan, with Rhem and others in reserve.

The Athletics have three noted sluggers in Cochrane, Simmons and Foxx. The Cardinals have Hafey and Bottomley, with Frisch and others almost as dangerous.

Mickey Cochrane says it will be a series in which low scores will prevail on account of the able pitching, but where home runs should do the big damage. This forecast seems reasonable. I rather think that Mickey figures the deciding factor will be Grove, one of the greatest pitchers that ever lived. A pitcher of this type is a formidable factor in any series—just as Christy Mathewson was in 1905—just as Jack Coombs was in 1910.

With the games played as they are, and the long jumps, Grove should win two games. He will pitch at least two great games. This is a big edge. It may not be enough to win if Derringer comes through and Grimes has any luck, which he missed last year.

These points are mentioned to show why there is more than normal interest in this next series, which starts on Thursday in St. Louis.

It should be full of everything that has made baseball one of the great games of the world, a game that is still national in its scope and interest.

Here you have great pitchers ready for the test, five of the greatest in the game, facing at least five of the seven or eight most dangerous hitters known to both leagues. Here you have class of the highest degree baseball has known in a long time. No other two teams have so definitely proved their superiority, have stood out so far above all competition.

Those who know sport and competition also know how suddenly the situation can change. But unless there is a decided shift from the dope as it looks, this should be one of the best series ever played, one of the most exciting—a series which might easily go to seven games.

Certainly the Cardinals have a better chance than they had a year ago and they were better then than the final count showed them to be. They are up against a great ball club, but they have quite a ball club on their own hook to work with.

PETRELS START ON HARD WORK FOR DUQUESNE

Backfield Changes Possible; Team To Drill on Pass Receiving.

By Jack Troy.

A busy half-week of practice faces Oglethorpe, beginning today, in preparation for the Petrels' first intersectional game of the season, against Duquesne Friday night at Pittsburgh.

Coach Harry Robertson was visibly cheered at the news of Duquesne's loss to University of West Virginia, 14 to 6, at the same time that his Petrels were losing a heart-breaking game to Chattanooga, traditional rival, Saturday.

Nutty Campbell, backfield coach, was in Morgantown to see the game and memorize the Duquesne plan of attack, and today he will go into a huddle with the freshmen, who later will imitate the system in scrimmage against the varsity.

NO LINE SHIFTS.

Robertson said yesterday he did not contemplate making any changes in the line, but was not certain about the backfield. There may be at least one shift there before the next game.

They're singing the praises of Dapper Myers, hard-running and hard-tackling senior fullback, and Frank Anderson Jr., scintillating halfback out at Oglethorpe. Theirs were the outstanding performances of the game despite the fact that Oglethorpe went under in the final minutes of play.

A lot of attention will be devoted to pass-receiving in the next few days, this department of play possibly causing Oglethorpe the loss of Saturday's game. Two passes that went uncaught in the second quarter would have turned defeat into victory, and it was obvious that they might have been caught.

AN INVESTIGATION.

Coach Robertson intends to find out this week why his line weakened under the onslaughts of Messrs. Raby, Haswell, Smith et al. and the pounding of the Moccasin forward wall. Certainly the Oglethorpe line, which held a slight advantage in weight over its opponents, was in as good shape, after almost four weeks of steady practice.

The margin of difference seems to have lain in the fact that the Moccasin backs "got up and got" while Oglethorpe's, slow in getting started, didn't sustain their drive. And the Chattanooga passing attack was in smoother working order than that of the Petrels.

RUTH AND GEHRIG END IN DEADLOCK

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The batting and slugging races in the major leagues this year wound up in about as tight a deadlock as anyone could ask.

The two big battles, the home run race between Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, and the struggle for the batting leadership of the National league ended with no decision, at least until the official averages come out.

Gehrig, who had been leading the King of Swat through a large part of the season only to drop back last week, came up to tie Ruth in the final game by clouting his 46th homer of the season. They were both well ahead of the National league leader, Chuck Klein, who hit 31 for the year. The two leagues had a total of 1,069 homers for the season, some 500 short of the 1930 total.

It took an extra decimal place in the unofficial averages to separate the three National league rivals, Chick Hafey and Jim Bottomley, of St. Louis, and Bill Terry, of New York, the 1931 National league champion. Bottomley came up on the final day, making four hits in eight trips to the plate, but could not quite get out of third place, while Terry, with one hit in four tries, and Hafey, with two out of three, lost a little ground.

There was little doubt about Al Simmons, of Philadelphia, repeating his American league triumph. He finished with an unofficial average of .390, while Babe Ruth could get no better than .373 for second place. A .350 average, the same as he made a year ago, gave Eddie Morgan, of Cleveland, third place.

The three leaders in each league:

Simmons, Athletics	128	513	106	200	.390
Ruth, Yankees	145	533	149	199	.373
Morgan, Indians	131	463	87	162	.350
Hafey, Cardinals	122	450	94	157	.3489
Terry, Giants	153	611	121	213	.3486
Bottomley, Cardinals	108	382	73	133	.3482

Early Lead Gives Wildcats Victory

GREENSBORO, N. C., Sept. 27.—(UP)—The North Carolina State Wolfpack defeated Davidson here last night, 18-7, scoring twice in the first and once in the second quarters, then being held scoreless for the rest of the game while Davidson came back strong.

State counted seven first downs in the first half to one by Davidson, but the Presbyterians made six consecutive first downs in the final quarter to score a touchdown and were within 20 yards of another when the final whistle blew.

McQuage and Dellinger were the strongest offensive players for State, while Peabody, a substitute, was the most elusive Davidson back.

State's first touchdown came on Dellinger's 23-yard run behind perfect interference. A 17-yard pass, Wilson to McQuage, led up to the scoring run.

Wilson scored the second touchdown on a 25-yard run around end which followed a run of similar length from midfield by McQuage. Cumuskey battered the line for the final State tally.

Peabody, McQueen and King combined in a sustained line attack to score Davidson's final quarter touchdown, McQueen scoring and King kicking the extra point.

The lineup:

DAVIDSON	Pos.	STATE
Raker (c)	L.E.	Gurneau
Whitefield	L.T.	Cobb
Mathis	L.G.	Duke
Conway	R.G.	La Forte

Brown	R.E.	Greason
King	Q.B.	McQuage
Pearce	L.H.	Don Wilson
Gardner	R.H.	Dellinger

Score by periods:

"Hotter 'n Blazes"
BY WOOD BURNS

But today Al was on a different sort o' trade . . . Al was buyin' hisself a car—yes, sir-e-e! a real, sure enough automobile.

Well, when Al had drove out to the gin an' back an' ever' body was convinced that he'd really bought the car, then a guy tells Al he ought 'o get 'im some car insurance—

Al didn't look at it that way—so he jest told the fellow he'd see him later . . .

Now comes the worst of an absolutely true story: On the way back home, with his new car, Al was stopped by a truck driver who begged "jest enough gas ter git ter town" . . .

While the gas was bein' transferred one o' the nuts struck a match, the gas fumes ignited, Al's car ketched fire, he drove all over a field o' green cotton trying to whip out the blaze, but nothing doin'—so finally Al had to jump to save his own life—and, well his car was a total wreck—and no insurance!

Don't matter what, how much or how little you own, if it'll burn and can be insured see your favorite member agent and have it covered with foolproof fire insurance.

And remember this one important thing:

INSTALLMENT XXV.

"Oh, I see—a dare!"

"A dare I made myself."

"That's probably what it was in the automobile, too."

He caught the reproach in her tone, and felt her pulling away slightly.

"What did you mean by that?" he demanded, and held her closer.

But somebody was cutting in. He watched her disappear, then skirted the swarm of stags in the center of the ballroom floor, and headed her off as she came drifting around the next curve in the stream of dancers.

"Are you angry with me?" he inquired.

"Why, no! Why should I be!"

"You implied a moment ago that what happened in the automobile between us was just a dare—a sort of stunt on my part, I suppose you mean."

"Well, perhaps it was just a sort of stunt on my part, too."

"Have you been feeling that way about it all this time?"

"All this time! Oh, I guess it hasn't seemed like 'all this time' to you."

"What do you mean?"

"If it had you'd have done something about it."

Before he could answer, another hand fell upon his shoulder. This time he didn't wait until Fabia had reached a curve. He dove into the stream midway, and recaptured her.

"You don't think I haven't been wanting to see you, do you?" instantly he resumed.

"Oh," he stated briefly, "just terribly."

"How wonderful to be a man and overcome difficulties the way you have these last four weeks?"

"Look here, I want to talk to you."

"Just terribly?" she taunted. Hello, Thatcher! I haven't laid eyes on you for the last hour." And without dropping her arms she floated from Dan Regan's shoulders to Thatcher Brookes'.

"Who is the handsome Adonis giving you such a rush all of a sudden?" inquired Thatcher. "I've asked several and nobody seems to know him."

"He's all through college. I don't believe you'd know him."

"What's his name?"

Before Fabia could answer, Dan was claiming her again. It was the fourth time in the last 20 minutes. Fabia's cheeks, usually pale as anemones in April, were tinged with scarlet.

"Can't we get out of this place!" said Dan. "I want to talk with you, and put a few things straight."

"Oh, hello, Tuck!" exclaimed Fabia, "I'm awfully sorry. Will you ask me again a little later? I've just this minute decided to sit out a little while."

Tuck hesitated. He had dropped in simply for a dance with Fabia. He was still in training and ought not to have broken his strict regime. But "All right," he smiled, with good sportsmanship.

"Let's go out this door," said Fabia to Dan, and, once off the ballroom floor in the palm-lined corridor, she said: "I've had enough of this dance. I'm spending the night at my grandmother's. I'll go and get my coat and meet you at the door."

In the dressing-room Fabia wrote: "Dear Thatcher: I've decided to go home early. It's a great party, and I won't drag you away at this hour. I'll give this to an usher, so you'll know. "FABIA."

She found Dan waiting for her at the door. He called a taxi and they drove in silence to her grandmother's door. Fabia flashed on the lights in the drawing-room.

"Now, please explain," Dan said, without preamble.

"Explain what?"

"Why you are so flippant and sarcastic about the last time we were together." He had become the accuser. His very manner reproached.

"Because I thought it couldn't have meant much to you."

"You thought wrong." His tone was gruff, buf there was a sort of fierce tenderness about it that struck through all Fabia's defenses.

"But you haven't seen me once!" she cried out, "you haven't even tried to see me!"

"I know I haven't."

"And it's been a whole month. I don't understand it. If I were a man, I—"

"No, you wouldn't, either," he interrupted. "The reason I haven't seen you is because—" he stopped and stood up. "Good Lord," he broke off, "why beat around the bush? The reason I haven't seen you," he brought out bluntly, "is that I was afraid we might fall in love with each other."

It didn't seem blunt to Fabia. It seemed the most natural thing in the world for him to say.

"I've thought of that, too," she replied.

"Have you?" Their gazes met. Dan looked away first. "Well," he said brusquely, "we mustn't. That's all. We simply mustn't! That is why I haven't spoken to you. I ought not to have danced with you tonight. It was a mistake."

"Why?"

"Because it just starts things up. We don't belong to other individuals, but we belong to other worlds. You've seen my home and family, and I've seen yours. We can't desert them, and they'd never mix."

"Please sit down," said Fabia.

"No. I'd better be going."

"Please."

He obeyed her abruptly.

"I think exactly as you do," she said.

"Of course you do. I'm not the kind of man you want to get to care for, and you're not the kind of a girl I want to get to care for. I've thought it all over. I've talked it all over, too, with Dr. Warburton."

"Yes. I wanted his advice. I'm sorry if you don't like it, but he'll never mention it to anyone."

"Oh, I do like it!" exclaimed Fabia. "It proves to me you took it seriously, after all."

"I never took anything more seriously in my life," he said grimly, "except my work."

"Oh, your work! Tell me about it. I want to know all about it, and all about you. I agree with you and Dr. Warburton entirely about our not being suited to—to care for each other. But we can be friends. I've just dozens of questions to ask you. First, where did you go to college?"

"That's easy," and he named a college almost as near the Back Bay as Harvard, but as far removed from debutantes as if located on the opposite coast.

"What did you do after college?"

"Medical school, but not the Harvard medical school," he added, with a shrug and smile, and he named an institution equally far removed from debutantes. "I got a scholarship there," he explained.

"And after medical school—what happens, if you're going to be a doctor?"

"If you're to be a doctor in Boston, you're usually appointed to be an interne in a Boston hospital."

"I see, and to what hospital were you appointed?"

"Oh, I didn't know there were legends in the medical profession, too."

"Oh, Lord, yes."

"I know there were lots of social legends. But I supposed if you were a good lawyer or a good doctor, it wouldn't matter how you got to be one."

Dan's face suddenly lighted up. "Why, that's exactly what I'm going to prove. That's the kick I'm going to get about succeeding in Boston. I want to prove that sheer ability and determination can be recognized even in places as steeped in traditions as this."

"Oh, how thrilling! How did you ever happen to be a doctor?"

"I had a younger brother who was sick for years."

"I know—Jimmie. Your mother told me."

Industrial Girls To Be Honored By Y. W. C. A. Monday Evening

Industrial department of the Y. W. C. A. entertains Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in honor of the industrial girls of the city in the administration building at 37 Auburn avenue, which will be open for the girls to inspect the dining rooms, recreation rooms, gym, swimming pool and lounge rooms which will be used exclusively by this group every Monday evening. Miss Carrie Lou Allgood, industrial secretary, offers varied interest-groups, allowing girls to select classes which appeal to them most. Clog, folk, tap-dancing and swimming will provide recreational activities, while classes in spoken English, music and other studies, supplemented by lectures by noted authorities, will give the industrial girl opportunity for well-rounded development and cultural advancement.

Dr. Robert B. Eleazer, outstanding speaker and economist, has been secured for a series of talks on current topics, as the girls have expressed a desire for a discussion group in which Dr. Eleazer will stimplate group thinking and enlarged interests. Aiding Miss Allgood in her set-up for her department are Miss Nannie Burwell Crow and Miss Elizabeth Boykin, of the "Y" health education department. Gymnasium and pool privileges will be granted Monday evenings to any industrial girl at special prices. Miss Crow will teach swimming and Miss Boykin will have classes in clog, tap and folk dancing. Special numbers will be presented in costume by a group of dancers from Agnes Scott College and a colorful solo dance by Miss Boykin will add to the entertainment. Miss Clara Nolen, Y. W. C. A. general secretary, who has enjoyed wide travels, will talk on "Girls in Other Lands" and display pictures and costumes she has collected. A series of travelogs has been planned for the ensuing weeks.

Miss Sara Carter, teacher of spoken English at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, has volunteered her services and will direct classes in this art. Monday evening she will present a skit from "The Neighbors," featuring Miss Ollie Mae Fleming and Miss Grace Petty. Attractive silhouette posters inviting girls to "swim, dance, study, chat, eat, play—at the Y. W. C. A." have been placed in factories, stores and manufacturing plants. Employers are requested to co-operate with the Y. W. C. A. and to encourage their employes to join.

Miss Allgood will be assisted in entertaining by members of the industrial committee: Mesdames C. H. Aikens, Emmett Quinn, Thornton Douglas, Comer Woodward, C. P. Roberts, N. W. Gibson, W. A. Smart and Miss Elizabeth Workman. Mrs. N. W. Gibson will have charge of refreshments. Monday, October 5, classes will be organized and fall routine will begin. A nominal fee of 50 cents will be charged each girl and will cover all expenses of classes. Suppers, at 15 cents, will be served every Monday at 6 o'clock.

Culbertson on Contract

The Hole-in-One at Contract

The Grand Coup is a play in Bridge so rare and unusual that those who have an opportunity to make it enter the same select circle in their favorite mental recreation as do the golfer who once in a life-time make a hole-in-one. The play is rare for the reason that the cards are very infrequently so distributed as to give the opportunity for it and that even when such distribution occurs, the player fails to recognize that Fortune has singled him out for an unusual distinction.

All of the so-called coup plays at Bridge involve two elements. The first is using an end play to capture an adverse trump honor when there are no trumps in the Dummy hand to lead through this adverse honor, and the second is reducing the number of trumps in the closed hand to the same number as held by the opponent whose trump you seek to capture so that the closed hand will not have to trump prematurely and at the end concede a trump trick.

These elements are in all coups at Bridge. The term "Grand Coup" is used to describe the play in which, in order to accomplish this result, it is necessary to trump winning cards in the Dummy. Lack of sufficient entries in the Dummy frequently make even the simple coups impossible, and lack of sufficient winning cards in the Dummy make the Grand Coup rare indeed. Their very rarity give these plays a tremendous value in the minds of Bridge players.

South	West	North	East
Pass	1♣	Dbl.(1)	Pass
3♠(2)	Pass	4♠(3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—With 3½ honor-tricks North's best procedure is to double for a Take-out rather than make a simple Overcall.

2—South holds 2 honor-tricks plus a long and fairly strong six-card suit. His correct response is therefore a double Jump bid as he might have been forced to bid on an entirely trickless hand.

3—Since the strength of the spade suit seems established by virtue of the double Jump, North's Raise to game is quite obvious.

In the play West opened the King of Clubs. A small club was played from the Dummy and East asked for the continuance of the suit by playing the 8 rather than the 2. This play is known in Bridge as an "echo," i. e., to play a high card before a low one of the suit when not making an attempt to take the trick is a request for your partner to continue that suit. West continued by leading the Ace of clubs, upon which East played the 2, and the third round of clubs was won by East's Queen. East was now in the lead and was forced to make a rather undesirable lead up to tenace holdings in the Dummy. He selected as his lead the 5 of diamonds. It was pure chance as between the two suits. He was unwilling to lead a trump as to do so might endanger the prospect of making a trick with the trump Knave.

South won this trick with the King in his own hand and led a small trump to the King in Dummy. The second round of trumps disclosed the fact that East had held four originally and that he must win a trump trick unless the coup situation could be obtained. At this time South had four trumps and East held two. To have a chance of making the contract the Dummy must be in the lead on the eleventh round of play. In the meantime South must have disposed of two of his surplus trumps. The Knave of diamonds was led and overtaken with the Queen. Most players would now lead another round of diamonds and discard a losing heart but to do so would give up the chance of making the hand. South instead led the Ace of diamonds, upon which East followed and South trumped.

Now South led a heart and finessed the Queen! The risk of losing an additional trick was small compared with the chance of making a Grand Coup. The finesse won and South could now see his contract as reasonably safe and his Grand Coup as made. From the Dummy he led the 10 of diamonds, which was the controlling card of that suit. East refused to trump and discarded a heart. South, however, got rid of his surplus trump by ruffing Dummy's trick.

Now all was easy. South led his last heart and won with the Ace and to the twelfth trick led a small heart from Dummy. East was helpless. He ruffed with the 9, South over-ruffed with the 10 and East's Knave of trumps fell under South's controlling trump on the last trick.

TODAY'S POINTER.

The first step in bidding is to determine the temper of the deal. On n st hands this means approaching with low suit bids.

Fifth District Flower Show Plans Are Made

The fifth district flower show will be held at Atlanta Woman's Club Thursday, October 1, and plans were featured at the luncheon meeting of the garden division of Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs held Friday. Mrs. J. R. Bachman, chairman, expressed gratification that more than 75 club representatives were present. Clubs of the district are invited to exhibit in as many classes as possible, and clubs exhibiting garden club scrapbooks are requested to phone Mrs. E. L. Harling, Hemlock 5743. Exhibits must be at the club between 10 and 12 o'clock for classification and garden club presidents will be in the receiving line at 2 o'clock. Reservations for luncheon may be made Wednesday with the Atlanta Woman's Club hostess.

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president of the district, and Mrs. Oscar Palmour, past president, complimented Mrs. Bachman's administration of the garden division, which is one of the most active branches of the federation. Mrs. Walter Lamb, co-chairman of the division, spoke on the picking, preservation and transportation of roses for exhibition purposes. Mrs. Lamb stated that roses should be allowed to stand in deep water immediately two hours and then placed in refrigerator. If an electric refrigerator is used, the roses should be wrapped in waxed paper to prevent evaporation of moisture, and the paper allowed to remain around them as long as possible after removing from refrigerator so as not to subject them to sudden change of temperature. Another suggestion was that flowers are transported best in covered boxes.

Mrs. Bachman expressed thanks to the Atlanta Woman's Club for its hospitality and garden clubs for the cooperation, introducing the official hostess, Mrs. C. E. Faust, chairman of the garden division of Atlanta Woman's Club, who presented her president, Mrs. W. P. Dunn. Mrs. Dunn stated that the Garden Clubs of America will meet in Atlanta, April, 1932. Mrs. Freeman expressed the opinion that no one is in closer touch with God than the flower grower. Mrs. Tom Brook, chairman of the department of education for the district, stated that women are giving their husbands a new interest by growing gardens. She said it is no longer unusual to hear groups of men discussing the culture of various flowers.

Visitors Honored.

Mrs. Annie Shepard entertained at bridge Wednesday in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sharpton, of Winder, and invited to meet them were Frank Berry, Miss Van Edith McCoy, Fred Maxwell, Miss Elmer Week. Hubert Daniel and Miss Elmer Week won high score.

Legion Auxiliary Plans Benefit Bridge.

MISS EVINRUDE II LEADS BOAT RACE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 27.—(AP) The Miss Evinrude II, of St. Louis, had the field to itself tonight in the final stretch of the speedboat race against time up the Mississippi river from New Orleans to St. Louis.

Advices from Hickman, Ky., reported the Miss Pentz Jones, of Memphis, only other contender, out of the race with a broken drive-shaft strut. The Memphis boat pulled up at Hickman at 7:30 o'clock tonight, after losing approximately three hours at New Madrid due to a damaged propeller.

When Hickman was reached the Miss Prentz Jones was about seven hours behind the Miss Evinrude.

The Miss Evinrude passed Hickman at 12:30 today.

ONTARIO'S BEER POLICY TO REMAIN UNCHANGED

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Stewart McLenaghan, vice chairman of the liquor control board of Ontario, announced today that no change from the present policy will be made this year. Reports had predicted a ruling to sell beer by the glass.

Liquor permits for 1932 are in the hands of the printers and will be ready for circulation about October 31, he added.

Premier George S. Henry said the report of permits for sale of beer by the glass was "ridiculous and absolutely without foundation."

MINOR GUNMAN FOUND MURDERED AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The body of Joseph Pellegreno, said by police to be a minor gangster, was found today at the side of a highway near Arlington cemetery, on the outskirts of Chicago's West Side. He had been shot to death.

Pellegreno was reported to be the last person to see Police Lieutenant Passerella, the "ace dry raider of Melrose Park," before the officer disappeared July 15. Passerella is believed to have been slain.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Eight Paraguayan and four Bolivian soldiers were killed in a clash between patrols of the two nations at Fort Zamaclay yesterday, the ministry announced in a communique issued tonight.

The communique said a Paraguayan patrol was reconnoitering, came upon the Bolivians occupying the fort and dislodged them. The Bolivians left four dead at the fort. The Paraguayan patrol later ran upon a company of Bolivian infantry about a half mile away, entrenched and supported by a squadron of cavalry.

The Paraguayan patrol returned to its base with a loss of eight men.

Temper Acts Like Alcohol: It Is an Artificial Stimulant, Removing Inhibitions, Making the Timid Brave and Making the Dull Glow.

Recently I have seen a lovely little girl of three years, purple in the face with rage, which started over a simple order to wear a certain pair of sox. She began with soft crying and finally worked herself into a perfect passion, which neither she nor her mother could control. Frankly, I was frightened at the fury of her fit of temper but her mother, seeing the uselessnss of argument, picked her up and thrust her, fully dressed, into a bathtub full of cold water. The melting mood that followed immediately, was ample proof that the heroic remedy was necessary. Said the mother, "My mother's life was ruined by my father's uncontrolled temper and I resolved that if I ever had any children of my own I would not let them grow up without learning to control theirs."

Temper is largely a matter of habit. A child learns early that he may, or may not, meet disagreeable situations with explosions that blow them, as well as the onlookers, to bits. Just as the thumb sucking habit must be dealt with before it has time to spoil the configuration of the mouth and later the teeth, so this loss of temper must be handled before the child's character is set in its final mould.

Temper is like alcohol in many ways. At first blush it seems to have many advantages, but, one by one, they turn themselves into disadvantages; it is an artificial stimulant, it removes all inhibitions, it often makes a dull person witty, a prosaic person eloquent and a timid person brave enough to spit in a bull dog's face. After the power of it is gone it leaves the victim weak, sick and remorseful. Like the alcohol habit, the oftener it is indulged the oftener will the necessity for its indulgence arise. But, in the end, the advantage is always with the man who has stayed sober and the man who has controlled his temper. As the drunk man may be counted to speak his mind about his own and the other fellow's business, so will the person in a fit of temper always say something he will regret. It is like spending all your money; it puts you at the mercy of those who haven't been so foolish. When you have told a man exactly what you think of him he has the big advantage over you because you don't know what he thinks of you. It is one of the best and quickest ways to dispose of your friends. Your family will put up with your tempers, even though they may not enjoy them, but your friends? They don't have to, and they won't. They may enjoy your wit at the other fellow's expense and admire your eloquence directed elsewhere, admire your bravery which is not bravery at all, but once you turn the stream of your vitriol at them they are gone.

The spirit behind temper is often good but its intrinsic worth lies in its control. I can't think of any real advantage that an uncontrolled temper ever gives anyone. It betrays you at home with the family, it trips you in arguments with your friends, it costs you victory in games and it is a terrible drain on self-respect. It certainly plays a big part in the divorce courts, and in every other court, for that matter.

There is no sense of security in friendship with a temper addict. He receives your confidences, enters your holy of holies, and one fine day he gets into a temper with you, over some unimportant trifle and, being insane, he throws open the doors and admits the public to your sanctum. Before he does that he always tells you what he thinks of you. Not many of us can stand the game of truth when it is played as a game. As for hearing our faults and foibles laid bare in hot heat, well, we can live without it and will.

One can't get very far along the highway without meeting obstacles and detours. Getting into a temper doesn't remove the obstacles, or shorten the detour. It only says to the world, that is passing by at the time, that there isn't enough stamina and sanity to make the grade, that some artificial stimulation is necessary. These inside upsets that spill over on any one who happens along at the time don't make us awfully strong with the fellow travelers.

An old gentleman with a fine mind and a most agreeable personality was ruminating the other day on his failure to get along in life. Said he, "My main trouble was an uncontrolled temper. I used to be very proud of it and consider it an accomplishment to be able to tell a man what I thought of him when he made me angry, but I know now that it was the big mistake of my life."

You temper addict, don't think because you get by your mother's bathtub without a ducking that you have escaped for good. Some day when you least expect it some giant will come and thrust you screaming into the water. The melting mood will follow the experience too. Here's hoping it won't be too late.

BAY GIVES UP CLUES IN COLLINGS MYSTERY

Men's Clothing Found To Substantiate Story by Victim's Widow.

HUNTINGTON, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Detectives dragging Oyster Bay harbor today found articles of clothing resembling those which Mrs. Lillian Collings said two men threw overboard from a canoe in which they abducted her after killing her husband on the night of September 5.

Deputy sheriffs, with grappling hooks, searched the bottom of the harbor in the vicinity of the anchorage of the little motorboat Bo Peep, in which the widow was found early on the morning of September 10. They found two pairs of men's trousers, two shirts, a man's handkerchief and a bathing cap.

Mrs. Collings, in her seven-times told story, had said the men who carried her away from her husband's yacht, the Penguin, changed their clothing while in the green canoe and tossed their old clothing overboard.

No previous attempts had been made to search the waters near the scene of the alleged incidents until District Attorney Alexander G. Blue, of Suffolk county, determined today to attempt to verify that angle of her story.

It was not known whether the articles found agreed with Mrs. Collings' descriptions of those worn by the two men she said boarded the Penguin, beat her husband and threw him overboard.

FARMER BROWN'S BOY GETS A THRILL.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

So long as there results no ill
There's stimulation in a thrill.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Whistler the Marmot had waited until the last minute before diving to safety under the rocks as Talons the Eagle swooped at him. He was sputtering angrily as he disappeared, yet he was enjoying the experience to a certain extent. It was a sort of game, the game of life. He was angry because he had been disturbed in the midst of a meal, and because he felt it the right and proper thing to be angry with anyone who tried to catch him. At the same time he always got a thrill from seeing how long he could wait yet escape, for Talons came that way frequently and had tried many times to catch him. He is very fond of Marmot.

Now always before when Talons had missed Whistler he had at once checked his swoop and kept on his way to look for some other less wary Marmot, but this time he didn't do this. "This fellow thinks he is very smart and needs a lesson," said Talons to himself. "I'll try giving him a surprise. It won't cost me anything and I may get a dinner out of it. Anyway, it will be some satisfaction to give him a real scare. He needs it."

So instead of continuing on his way he dropped down on a rock just back of the place where Whistler had disappeared. In order to see him there Whistler would have to come well out of his hole. There was another rock which would prevent his seeing Talons by just poking his head out.

"I won't have to wait long," thought Talons. "I've watched him many times from high up in the sky. He always expects me to go on and he always pops out before I am out of sight and the first thing he does is to look up in the sky to see which way I have gone. Well, I hope he'll do the same thing this time."

Now all the time Farmer Brown's Boy was watching with excited interest from a hiding place he had built among the rocks close by. He had had something of a thrill when Talons had swooped and Whistler had waited until the last minute, but now when he saw Talons alight on that rock he got more of a thrill, for he guessed just what Talons was planning.

Was he about to see the smartest watchman of the heights outwitted? Was he to see the end of Whistler the Marmot? The very thought made him uncomfortable. In the first place, he had become so much interested in this little fellow whose whistle had so fooled him the first time he had heard it that he wanted to know him and his ways better. Then, too, he reminded him of his cousin, Johnny Chuck, back home on the Green Meadows, and Johnny Chuck and Farmer Brown's boy are old friends. Johnny is a favorite of his and he didn't like to think of Johnny's cousin being caught by that great bird with the hooked bill and the great curved claws.

"Of course," thought he, "I can scare Talons away. I wonder if I ought to. It don't seem right to allow Whistler to be killed. At the same time Talons isn't doing anything wrong. He has to eat to live and I suppose he has just as much right to live as Whistler has. He is simply obeying the laws of Old Mother Nature. If he is smart enough to catch Whistler I suppose I ought not to interfere. Well, I'll wait and see what happens. I can interfere at the last minute if I have to."

So in growing excitement and suspense Farmer Brown's Boy waited. He didn't have to wait long. Talons had guessed right. Whistler was impatient. He wanted to finish his dinner. Besides, he knew, or thought he knew, that Talons had simply kept on his way. So it was only a few minutes before Farmer Brown's Boy saw his nose appear, then his whole head. Farmer Brown's Boy wanted to cry out and warn him, but he held his tongue. He fairly shook with excitement. It was a thrilling moment.

Whistler waited an instant, then came wholly out and the first thing that he did was to look up in the sky for Talons. Not seeing him, he sat up for a general look around. This was Talons' chance. He pitched down from that rock with big claws spread. But the instant he moved Whistler saw him, leaped to one side and darted under a convenient rock. Farmer Brown's Boy stifled the yell he had been about to utter and sighed with thankfulness.

HEAVY YIELD OF GRAIN REPORTED IN SOVIET

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Grain production in the soviet union for 1931 is expected in authoritative quarters to be approximately equal that of 1930, which was the largest on record, notwithstanding acknowledged damage to the spring crop in several areas from excessive rainfall.

Although the government thus far has made no estimate of the size of this year's crop it was considered in informed quarters that the rain damage had offset to a great extent the effect of an increased acreage and the greatly expanded use of tractors and other mechanized farming implements.

General figures on the progress of the harvest have not been made public, except in terms of acreage reaped, which does not give an indication of the extent of the damage or of the condition of the crops as a whole.

The total acreage reaped up to September 10 was 84,288,000 hectares (208,335,648 acres) or 88.6 per cent of the spring grain area and 43.7 per cent of the winter grain area. In 1930 the total grain harvest amounted to 87,364,480 metric tons, of which 28,360,000 were of wheat, from a total sown area of 252,042,000 acres, of which 8,348,026 acres were in wheat.

29TH DIVISION VETS URGE LEGALIZED BEER

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Twenty-ninth Division Association, in the closing sessions of its convention today, voted in favor of the immediate payment of cash bonuses to World War veterans and for the legalization of light wines and beer.

The association voted to hold its next convention in Norfolk, Va.

The bonus payments proposal was voted after considerable debate. Michael Britkopf, of Newark, adjutant of the association, placed the immediate payment resolution before the convention. Colonel Fitzhugh Minnigrode, of New York, immediately attacked the resolution as "unwise," and cited the action of the American Legion on the subject.

Richard C. Meade, of Cranford, N. J., joined Minnigrode in his effort to rally opposition, saying the convention should not be guided by the action of the Legion, but should follow the advice of President Hoover and his stated opposition against any further demands on the United States treasury.

When the resolution was put to a vote the adherents of the immediate payment of bonuses won, 24 to 12. The voting was by posts.

The convention also voted in favor of the reduction or elimination of interest charges on bonus certificates loans. This resolution, offered by the Hudson county (New Jersey) delegation, was opposed on the floor.

The vote for the legalization of light wines and beer was by acclamation, to the shouted chorus "We want beer." The resolution asked for the legalization because of "social and economic evils we deplore."

General C. G. Morton, of California, war-time commander of the division, was re-elected honorary president of the association.

Fairchild H. Hodges, of Norfolk, Va., was elected president to succeed H. J. Lepper, of Newark, who was elected secretary for the coming year.

Vice presidents were elected by the states which composed the Twenty-ninth division during the war. Vice president for Virginia, J. R. Kerrick, of Rixieville; vice president for Maryland, Harry C. Ruhl, of Baltimore; vice president for the District of Columbia, L. C. Vogt, of Washington; vice president for New Jersey, L. G. Bender, of Basking Ridge.

E. P. Bloomer, of Trenton, N. J., was elected treasurer; G. S. Stewart, of Philadelphia, historian; sergeant-at-arms, R. C. Bedford, of Baltimore, and adjutant, Michael Britkopf, of Newark, N. J.

Spanish Will Enforce Development of Lands

MADRID, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The government announced today that compulsory development of untilled lands, the first step in the agrarian reforms, would begin immediately.

The development will start in Andalusia and Extremadura, where the unemployment situation among farm workers is most acute.

Commissions directed by the police will investigate distribution of lands among workers' societies which can use farm machinery in conjunction with land owners.

After the next harvest the lands will be returned to the owners without indemnity pending further action by the assembly on agrarian bills.

SIX PERSONS INJURED IN YACHT COLLISION

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 27.—(?) Six persons received minor injuries tonight in the collision of the yacht Aloha, owned by Arthur Curtiss James, former commodore of the New York Yacht Club, and the steamer Sagamore, which plies from Providence and Block Island to this port. The injured were passengers of the Sagamore.

The after awning and companionway of the steamer were ripped off, but the Aloha escaped damages.

MISSOURI CONSTABLE WOUNDED BY SHOTS

HAYTI, Mo., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Jesse McNally, constable of Concord township, was shot in the back and critically wounded last night while on his way home from Hayti. He was taken to a Memphis, Tenn., hospital.

Two men riding with McNally said a second machine followed McNally's and that one of the two men in it fired on the constable as he was about to turn into the driveway leading to his home. There were eight bullet holes in the rear of his car.

McNally said he recognized the driver of the other automobile, but his name was withheld.

BONDS SHIFT SWIFTLY AS HISTORY IS MADE

BY ALEXANDER HENDERSON.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The bond market contributed its share to the historic financial events of the past week.

Sharp losses occurred throughout the list although he market toward the close of the period had a fairly steady tone. The overshadowing influence was the decision of the British government over the previous weekend to go off the gold standard.

This action induced wholesale liquidation which resulted in numerous new records for low prices of many individual bonds, the lowest average prices in about a decade and the largest daily turnover, on Thursday, in a year and a half. The widest losses occurred on Monday.

From the wide losses between sales, especially in the foreign issues, it was apparent that buying orders at prices even approximately near previous sales were absent and that urgent liquidation was the dominating influence.

The suspension of gold exports by the Danish government on Tuesday was a minor bearish influence, promptly reflected in the recession in Danish bonds. Reports of possible similar developments by other Scandinavian countries contributed to the sag in prices.

The nervous fluctuations of other security markets resulting from the same causes encouraged liquidation by interests which desire to maintain strong liquidation positions at such times.

Evidence of this condition appeared in the recession in United States treasury and Liberty loans. Several of this group sold at new low prices for this year. The two most recent issues, the treasury 3s of 1951-55 and the 3 1-8s of 1946-49, sold at discounts and several of them made net losses of one point or more, which are substantial declines for this group.

With such unsettlement throughout the bond market it was to be expected that offerings of new issues would be at a minimum. Such bonds as were floated consisted of small amounts of municipal issues.

Two reports of an unfavorable nature, which had wide circulation at times, proved groundless. Explanations of the slump in government and gilt edge corporate issues included the fear that the American Legion convention would adopt a resolution demanding immediate cash payment of bonus insurance certificates and that the rediscount rate of the federal reserve bank would be advanced following the rise in acceptance yield rates.

British Gold Suspension Seen As Beneficial to U. S. Credit

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—As respects the condition we call "the times," the one question about which there is the most widespread curiosity is the effect likely to be made on business in the United States, by the removal of the British pound from the fixed gold basis. The writer of this dispatch has been at pains to talk with men in business and public life best qualified to judge and as to practically all the broad and major lines to effect, they agree.

There is in the situation one factor that makes appraisal difficult or impossible. That is the state of public psychology in which the event happens to fall. If the fall of the pound had occurred in a time of normal prosperity and normal business equilibrium in America, the consequences could be calculated by qualified experts almost with the exactness of decimal points. The effect would vary in their directions but all would be calculable. The effect on commodity prices would take one direction, the effect on our foreign trade another. The effect on one class of securities, bonds and mortgages would take one direction; the effect on another class, stocks, would take a different direction. All, however, would be determinable and definite.

Times Abnormal.

Because the times happen to be disturbed and because the public psychology happens not to be normal, exact statement of the consequences is impossible. If present conditions were normal, the descent of the British pound from its former value would be seen as a conspicuous elevation of the influence of the American dollar and of its status in international trade. It would be seen that either the American dollar or the French franc, presumably the former would take the place the British pound has held for centuries as the familiar unit for international transactions throughout the world.

What has happened would be described in a picturesque metaphor. A fundamental thing, the principle of the gold basis for currency is changing its nest. It is moving, temporarily certainly, and probably permanently, from Britain to America. The gold basis and the whole group of business practices that cluster round it are in process of hiving. They are leaving the country that was their home for centuries. At the moment they are swarming. So soon as the confusion of swarming is over, and so soon as world psychology is normal, it will probably be found that the new hive is in the United States.

Conditions Better.

Wholly regardless of the drop of the pound, the immediate fact is that fundamentally business conditions in the United States are farther along is the beginnings of recovery toward normal than is commonly known. It may belong in the category of "believe it or not" information but the fact is that there is a little rash of prosperity breaking out in spots throughout the country. When idle money accumulates as it has during two years past, its tendency to express itself in purchases is almost like the law of water seeking its own level. Among other effects there are at least three little local real estate booms, all affecting small areas widely removed from each other. The volume of real estate transactions throughout the entire country is increasing, especially in rural districts and smaller cities.

The complete picture of what is going on in industry can be understood by looking upon business as being divided into two broad fields. One has to do with securities, especially mortgages, arising out of transactions made in terms of the high prices of two years or more ago. That field of businesses is still going through the slow pains of readjustment. The process indirectly affects all business, because much of it takes place in banks, and it has a tendency to make banks less free to lend.

Nevertheless the other field of business which consists of manufacturing and selling at the new prices of today is active to a degree not fully understood. Manufacturers of ordinary staple, consumable goods who are buying at today's prices of raw materials and selling on the same new basis, and retailers who are doing the same, are operating at comparatively satisfactory volume and profit all over the country.

Heavy Lines Lag.

Manufacturers of heavy goods, such as steel, lag behind for a specific reason. The things they make are sold on orders that involve large sums of money. The customers for such products, buildings and the like, usually depend on borrowed money for their operations. To borrow they go to banks and to investors. The banks and investors generally, being preoccupied with conditions arising out of old borrowings at the prices of two years ago, are hesitant to make new loans, especially new loans over a long-time basis.

The tendency of banks to restrict loans in order to keep their funds liquid for depositors who may want them, is basically wholesome. Nevertheless it operates as a deterrent to a business expansion that is ready and even eager to get under way. In the same way, the tying up of investors' funds in old loans of two years ago has the effect of drying up the springs upon which some heavy forms of industry, new building, for example, must wait.

MATTRESS COMPANY SAYS BUSINESS GOOD

The Superior Mattress Company, 835 Bankhead avenue, reports through the general manager, H. R. Simon, that they are having unusually good business at this time.

"We attribute much of our recent activies," says Mr. Simon, "to the return of the vacationists who always appreciate a good bed after their travels, and if their own bed does not compare favorably with those that they slept on elsewhere, they have their mattress made over.

"When a mattress gets old and lumpy, and the ticking wears out it should be made over. Due to the fact that we have good equipment and an organization of expert workmen, we can renovate a mattress and put a new ticking on it so it will be greatly improved.

"There are two features that we added this year that are adding to our weekly volume of business. The first is the inner spring work and the other is the renovating of feather beds.

"The advantage of making over these old feather beds in this new way is that both sides of the ticking are sewed together about every nine inches and the feathers are confined to their own narrow section and cannot shift about, which was the principal fault with the old-style feather mattresses. To have an old, discarded feather bed changed into a comfortable one, call Hemlock 9274."

LACKAWANNA MAKES SALARY, WAGE CUTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Lackawanna railroad tonight announced a reduction of from 7 1-2 to 10 per cent in the salaries of officers receiving more than $6,000 annually, and a short-time schedule for all other employes, effective October 1.

The new working schedule calls for a two-day layoff each month without pay, which, the announcement said, was equivalent to a wage reduction of 6 2-3 per cent.

Some time ago the railroad placed certain groups of employes on a short-time basis. They will not be affected by the new arrangement.

Wall Street Briefs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—New bond offerings scheduled by 46 states and municipalities for the coming week total $38,028,632, or slightly in excess of the weekly average of $37,604,019 of new offerings to date, the Daily Bond Buyer reports.

The Central Republic Bank & Trust Company has been appointed trustee for Selected American Shares and Selected Income Shares to succeed the Foreman State Trust & Savings bank.

The net income of the Virginian Railway Company for the month of August was $359,852, compared to $395,326 in the same month last year, according to the monthly financial statement issued today by the railway. This brings the total net income for the first eight months of 1931 to $1,930,077, against $2,718,347 for the same period of 1930.

Unfavorable dividend changes in the week ended September 26 again increased over the previous week, says the Standard Statistics Company, numbering 73 in comparison with 65 in the previous six-day period. Favorable changes also increased, 24 being reported against 14 in the preceding week.

A protective committee has been formed for the holders of approximately $32,000,000 of the City of Asheville, N. C., of Buncombe county, and of the several school, sanitary, water, sewer, road and bridge districts of Buncombe county. Bondholders are requested to deposit their bonds with the Chase National Bank of New York.

The Middlewest Utilities Company reports 542 instances of new industries or expansion of present industries in communities served by the Middlewest system during the first six months of 1931, providing work for 16,000 additional employes with an annual payroll of $20,000,000.

David A. Laing, former sales manager of the General Motors Company and affiliated with G. M. C. for 13 years, has been named general manager of the Sealed Joint Construction Company.

Volume of sales in silk piece goods during August showed an increase of 26.6 per cent, compared with the previous month, reports the Silk Association of America, and were 11.4 per cent higher than August, 1930.

Portugal Unemployment Decreases 40 Per Cent

LISBON, Portgual, Sept. 27.—(AP) Unemployment has decreased 40 per cent in Portugal since last December, it was officially announced today. The total number of unemployed is now 35,000, it was said. The decline is ascribed to the initiation of extensive development of public works.

AUSTIN BROS. REPORTS 6 BRIDGES UNDER WAY

The Atlanta offices of the Austin Brothers Bridge Company, opposite Fort McPherson, report that business is good, having recently completed two large bridges in North Carolina, one in Florida and with six more now under way or in project.

The last of the three big bridges they just completed was across the Suwanee river, between Jasper and Live Oak, Fla. It has already proved very popular as a cut-off route between thickly populated sections of Florida, and will be much traveled by many of those passing through Valdosta, Ga., and the west coast of Florida.

Four of the bridges under way are across the Satilla river, between Jesup and Brunswick, Ga. Three of them will be known as flood-tide or safety bridges to allow the heavy overflow waters in a marshy region to pass off through their own natural channels when the river gets out of bounds.

The largest bridge they are building is over the Satilla river itself and is to take care of the heavy traffic over this short cut, through places that heretofore could only be reached in some seasons of the year by going a long way around.

Another bridge they are building at this time is in Talbot county, across Laza creek, about halfway between Manchester and Talbotton, near Woodland, Ga. This new bridge replaces an old one that was at this point. The old bridge was subject to quick overflow conditions due to the fact that it was just at the southern end of Pine mountain and when a heavy rain fell on the mountain range the water would come over the bridge.

The sixth bridge will be built across Lynches river in South Carolina, for the South Carolina highway department, and will be 1,700 feet long—mostly of steel and concrete. This bridge will be in Florence county and connects the small towns of Olanta and Effingham.

SHOE REPAIR SHOP FEATURES FINE WORK

The Sutton Shoe Repairing Company, 11 Edgewood avenue, is maintaining its reputation for doing fine shoe rebuilding, and many visitors who come to Atlanta leave shoes there to be fixed.

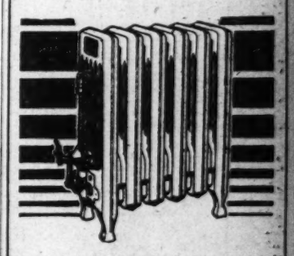

This well-equipped shop gives customers the choice of having soles sewed on their shoes in the regular way or cemented on by the new Penn-Standard process. The shoe sole is cemented on like a patch is vulcanized on an automobile tube in the latter method.

Sutton's shoe repairing shop offers three grades of leather for use on shoes, according to their condition, but no matter what grade of leather is used the same high-grade workmanship is done.

The manager, S. J. Bethune, has spent nearly a third of a century in making and repairing shoes and when he changed to repairing from manufacturing a few years ago he brought the years of the factory-trained superintendent into the rebuilding business. He surrounded himself with expert workmen and installed equipment that affords fast, good work.

Lindberghs To Extend Relief Work In China's Flood-Stricken Areas

NANKING, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh readily agreed to extend his sphere of operations in behalf of China's millions of suffering flood refugees.

Dr. Heng Liu, head of the national flood relief commission's health staff, asked the famous American and his wife to fly over the area adjacent to Hankow to carry out survey work similar to that which has given the commission such valuable information concerning Kiangsu province conditions.

Lindbergh agreed to take off tomorrow morning. Accompanying the flying colonel and his wife will be Dr. Borcic, health expert of the League of Nations, who is visiting in China.

They will stop at Wuhu to inspect relief work going on there before continuing to Hankow, where they expect to spend several days making surveys over Hupeh province, especially along the Han river where conditions were believed bad. The commission lacks any definite information on conditions in the Han river district.

Officials were loud in their praise of services the Lindberghs have given and applauded their readiness to undertake work in the Hankow district, for conditions there were extremely bad with disease, especially cholera, rampant.

Colonel Lindbergh today refused to discuss the trying conditions he has encountered during the survey flights he has made over the Grand canal district within the last few days. He referred questioners to his report on conditions he made to the commission.

In it he told of many thousands of square miles of land under water, inhabitants living in boats or roof tops and crowded on rapidly eroding dykes. The report says:

"September 21 we made a reconnaissance of the flooded area between the Grand canal and the Yellow sea. We found this area extended from Taichow on the south almost to the old bed of the Yellow river on the north with a total area of 8,000 square miles badly flooded.

"The walled city of Kinghwa was badly flooded and the surrounding fields were covered with several feet of water. The nearest ground free from flood water is more than 25 miles south of the city. Literally hundreds of small villages throughout the entire area are standing in water, which in many instances covered all but the roofs. Those inhabitants still remaining are living in small boats moored in the streets. In many instances walls of the houses had collapsed.

"When we flew over this area the wind had whipped up the waves over the fields and the few remaining dykes were being eroded away rapidly. Thousands of refugees had congregated on dykes lining the Grand canal and on an uncompleted road just south of the flood area.

"The city of Fowning, on the north, was badly flooded. On the east the flood waters had almost reached the sea, and in the far northeast section the flood water was held back only by the dykes which originally were constructed to keep out the high tide of the sea. Water was pouring with a high velocity through numerous breaks in the Grand canal into this area, and there were no signs of receding levels east of the canal.

"September 22 we flew over the area west of the Grand canal. In the upper section of the Hwai river floods were receding and water was within the river banks. Wherever the floods had drained off inhabitants were replowing their fields and repairing what was left of their homes. Crops in the area of the actual flood have been completely destroyed.

"As we approached the Grand canal from the west there was very little sign of receding of the flood, and none of the fields had drained sufficiently to be plowed. In all there were several thousand square miles west of the Grand canal completely flooded and much more where crops had been severely damaged.

"September 23 we covered two districts. First we flew southwest of Nanking over the cities of Taiping, Wuhu, Kaoshun and Suiyang. East of the Yangtse the district was badly flooded. The city of Wuhu had suffered the worst. Water was standing in the strets of the walled city of Taiping and in Kaoshun and Suiyang. In the country districts many houses were in water almost to their roofs, and many had collapsed. There were, however, high points of land and hills much closer to the flooded areas than in the Grand canal district, and many refugees had constructed temporary shelters just above the water line.

"The second area visited was west of the Yangtse in the district around and south of Chao lake. Floods had again caused great damage in hundreds of square miles in this district. The city of Chaohsien, however, was only partially flooded."

4 Killed, 12 Injured In Auto-Train Crash

MERCHANTVILLE, N. J., Sept. 16.—(AP)—At least four men were killed and between 10 and 12 others were injured so seriously they may die when a Camden-Long Branch Pennsylvania Railroad local hit a truck carrying 25 laborers home from work at a grade crossing late today.

Samuel Balentine, 17, of Moorestown, N. J., driver of the truck, escaped with slight injuries. He said he could not explain how the accident occurred.

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE No. 7

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The pithecanthropus ate in silence. Tarzan from the near-by crotch of a tree watched him cut small slices of the deer's meat with his keen knife. His meal finished, the guest carefully wiped his fingers and lips with leaves from an overhanging branch. The ape-man wondered to what peculiar people or tribe his odd companion belonged.

Then he looked up at Tarzan with a pleasant smile that revealed a row of strong white teeth. He spoke a few words which the ape-man judged were a polite expression of thanks. Then he sought a comfortable place in the tree for the night . . . It was just before dawn when Tarzan was awakened by the shaking of the tree in which he had chosen to sleep.

As Tarzan opened his eyes he saw that the man-thing was also astir. Glancing around quickly to find the cause of the disturbance the ape-man was astounded at the sight that met his eyes. The dim shadow of a colossal form reared close beside the tree, and he realized that it was the scraping of this giant body against the huge tree that had awakened him.

That such a tremendous creature could have approached so closely without awakening him filled the ape-man with both wonderment and chagrin. In the gloom he thought at first the intruder was an elephant, larger than any he had ever before seen. Then in the approaching dawn, the dim outlines became clearer and Tarzan saw a thing that would have sent the shivers up the spine of an ordinarily brave man.

NERVOUSNESS BRINGS CURB FLUCTUATIONS

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The curb jiggled nervously last week, responding to the swift changes of sentiment that characterized financial markets everywhere.

The general trend was lower until the later sessions when some recovery took place. Precautions against too bad a break were taken on Monday when the exchange authorities banned short selling on the theory that some protection was advisable in view of the British crisis. Rallying tendencies on this market while the order was in effect were less aggressive than on the big board and what gains had been made disappeared swiftly in the Thursday break. Some of the ground had been retraced by the week-end.

Selling which dribbled in almost steadily suggested some strong box liquidation, although professional operations accounted for a large part of the total dealings. There was continued pressure against the utilities, with the result that many found new lows. Electric Bond & Share hit a new bottom at 18 3-4. Commonwealth Edison, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, American Gas, American Light and others were rather sharply depressed.

Two prominent foreign stocks, Woolworth Ltd. and Ford Ltd., slumped several points. Ford of Canada "A" also was weak, but much more spectacular declines developed in the familiar group of high-priced specialties as well as in numerous inactives. Oils dropped, with the widest variations in pipe line shares.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings again reflect some additional payments through the banks. The total last week for the leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $7,246,870,000 was 15.6 per cent less than that of last year. At New York city, the amount was $5,022,577,000, a decline of 14.2 per cent, while for all cities outside New York $2,224,203,000 showed a reduction of 18.6 per cent. Clearings last week were only slightly less than the exceptionally heavy total of the previous week, and with that exception were the largest for any week back to the middle of July. The decline from the previous week was only $55,306,000, or 0.8 per cent. Larger stock dealings are reflected in the clearings at New York city. At a number of the leading outside centers, the decline from a year ago was very much smaller than it has been for many months past, notably at the eastern and some of the southern centers, while at Cincinnati a substantial increase appears.

Bank clearings for the week, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., and average daily bank clearings for the year to date, are compared herewith (000 omitted):

WAGE REDUCTION SEEN AS CONSTRUCTIVE STEP

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Guaranty Trust Company in its monthly survey of business takes the view that the wage and salary reductions by the United States Steel Corporation and other important companies "marks what many have regarded as an inevitable step in the general economic readjustment of prices and values."

"With the great reductions in the wages of capital and the lowered costs of living through lower commodity prices, wage readjustments have been forced as part of the general situation. That wages could maintain a position in opposition to the general trends was not logically conceivable."

Business World Encouraged By 'Clearing Atmosphere'

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The hope that the violent convulsions in the economic structure during the last week may represent the final gasps of depression has mitigated the shock to business confidence.

The British crisis, together with wage reductions by some of America's leading corporations, are widely felt to have cleared the atmosphere considerably, in both foreign and domestic affairs, but most commentators point out that the ceremony of finally lowering the depression to a peaceful grave will take time.

The week's reports on domestic business and trade again failed to indicate any palpable gains or important losses, but, as the Guaranty Trust Company points out in its monthly survey, to be published tomorrow, "with European affairs still in such an unsettled state, it is not surprising that domestic trade has failed to show any tangible signs of improvement."

Most branches of industrial and commercial activity thus far have not responded to the stimulating influences usually experienced at this time of year, the survey continues, and in some directions, where expansion has been noted, there is little encouragement for the belief that it reflects anything but purely seasonal forces at work.

The textile, shoe and apparel industries continue to maintain an encouraging degree of activity, as well as some other lighter lines of goods essential to everyday needs.

However, they have not exerted as yet any visible quickening effect on other industries, particularly the basic lines. In fact the Guaranty survey says that recent weekly reports indicate that activity in most lines has declined further.

"It seems clear," the survey adds, "that any marked improvement in business will have to await a return of confidence in conditions abroad."

The Standard Statistics Company says that such betterment as will be witnessed during the remainder of the year probably will be postponed until November, and will not attain full seasonal proportions.

While violent disagreement exists as to the desirability of wage reductions, such as the fresh wave of cutting, which has come in the last week with the 10 per cent reduction by the United States Steel Corporation, there is a widespread feeling that final settlement of the problem removes a disturbing element of uncertainty and builds a firmer foundation for the eventual upturn now so generally expected next spring.

In commodities, a flurry of speculation in bar silver carried the price of that metal up to around the year's best prices.

The effect on the British situation upon silver is not yet clear, and speculators seem to be actuated by the vague tradition that anything that hurts gold should help silver. If, indeed, silver does regain a substantial portion of its former purchasing power, it should have a decidedly vitalizing effect upon world trade, in restoring the buying power of the far east and Mexico.

Freight car loadings report was for the week containing the Labor Day holiday, so was not comparable to the previous week. Some seasonal adjusted indices indicated that the drop was a little larger than might be attributed to the holiday.

The mercantile reviews said trade had been hurt by unseasonably hot weather. Steel production eased off slightly. Building is being maintained, large projects. Electric power consumption for the third week of the month compared a little more favorably with last year than the first two weeks did.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON SUFFERS LIGHT LOSSES

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Trading has been more active in the cotton market here the past week than in any like period this season. On the other hand, prices have been nervous and erratic, mainly due to the readjustments necessary as a result of the suspension of the gold standard in Great Britain. While the immediate effect of this action was price inflation in England, the first effect on this side of the Atlantic was a downward course of prices on the belief that the decline in sterling would reduce the buying power of Great Britain and her colonies and adversely affect exports of cotton from this country.

The immediate effect of the British action was a decline in prices of cotton to new low levels for the season with October down to 6 cents. There soon developed a firmer tone in the market, however, largely as the result of extensive straddle trading between the markets. The sharp advance in silver and a firm stock market coupled with good trade and speculative buying soon turned prices upward and by the middle of the week prices had recovered about $3 a bale from the early lows.

The advance in silver, which at one time reached above 19d per ounce in London, was a stimulating influence, as it was pointed out that this would greatly enhance the buying power of oriental countries and countries of South America, where silver is the main medium of exchange. The foreign markets developed considerable strength and on Thursday Liverpool reported spot sales of 45,000 bales, the largest daily total on record, in fact, double the previous record total of 23,000 bales dating back to April 30, 1897.

Late in the week prices declined rather sharply with weakness in the stock market and on Friday October dropped to a new low for the season at 5.93 on the issue of October notices for 38,000 bales here. As the notices were stopped promptly by spot interests there was some slight recovery from the lowest and the close on Saturday showed net losses for the week of only 12 to 13 points.

	High.	Low.	Close	Last Year
Oct.	6.58	5.93	6.02	10.14

Railway Age says railroad stock prices on September 19 were on an average the lowest since April, 1897, while the average price of industrial stocks on the September date was 73 per cent higher than when it reached bottom in the 1921 depression. It asserts that the principal reason for the present prices of railroad shares is that current net earnings "are the worst ever reported."

COTTON GOODS SALES EXCEED PRODUCTIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Our sales this week have again been in excess of production, this time by about 10 per cent. There has been a decided increase in the volume of print cloth business this week. Although prices have recorded a further drop of 1-8c, more print cloths have been sold this week than in any week since the last of June. These sales were mostly for quick and October delivery. There was a good volume of business in narrow sheetings, largely for the bag trade and other manufacturing purposes, also of wide goods for manufacturing trades. Broadcloths continued active though scarcity of goods for early delivery kept sales below last week's level. Sheets and pillowcases were conspicuously active and towels moved in good volume.

Generally speaking, the fall business has been slow in coming in. Cutters, converters and jobbers still have a quantity of goods to buy for delivery during the next three months and it looks as if the customary heavy September and early October volume would be distributed this year between September, October and, possibly, early November. In many grey goods constructions the spot situation has continued to grow gradually tighter though not enough so yet to attract more than passing comment but, as the volume of unfilled orders is built up, this situation will begin to make itself plain to all.

The dropping of the gold standard by Great Britain has added, for the time being at least, to the uncertainties concerning values. It has led to record-breaking sales of spot cotton in the Liverpool market, and in connection with the advance in silver has brought about a decidedly better feeling in Manchester concerning the far eastern trade. Just what effects it will have on our country is still uncertain. Stocks registered a very rapid advance on Wednesday and an equally rapid decline yesterday, showing the confusion that exists. It would hardly seem that it could affect Great Britain's export trade favorably and at the same time be favorable to ours.

BONDHOLDERS' PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

To the Holders of Bonds of the City of Asheville, North Carolina; of Buncombe County, North Carolina; and of the several School, Sanitary, Water, Sewer, Road and Bridge Districts of Buncombe County, North Carolina:

Buncombe County, North Carolina, and the several special districts located therein, and the City of Asheville, located in Buncombe County, are in default in the payment of the principal and/or interest of their outstanding bonds. As these defaults are inter-related, a Bondholders' Protective Committee has been formed to conserve the interests of the holders of the outstanding bonds of all of these political organizations, including the outstanding bonds heretofore issued by the Towns of West Asheville, Biltmore, Kenilworth and South Biltmore, which have been annexed by the City of Asheville. The prompt deposit of bonds with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York as Depositary, under the terms of the Deposit Agreement dated September 14, 1931, is strongly urged, as it is believed that the holders of the bonds of all these defaulting communities can best protect their interests by creating a single organization to seek a solution of their common problem.

...RYS PLAN DRIVE WITHIN LEGION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—...enry L. Stevens Jr. arrived here ...oday to find the American Legion, ...hich he now heads, named as a spe...al objective in 1932 campaign plans ... organized prohibition forces.

The new national commander of ...egionnaires came to return President ...oover's unexpected call on the De...roit convention, where the vote was ...ast that stirred dry leaders to ac...ion. He will see Mr. Hoover to...orrow.

His voice a trifle hoarse from a ...eek of talking politics, Stevens was ...ooking forward to solitude and fish...ng at Roanoke, Va. He met a war...nuster of drys intent upon reaching ...rohibition adherents in the Legion ...hom they contend did not attend the convention.

A two-day meeting of the board of strategy of the national conference of organizations supporting the 18th amendment had just drafted a plan of attack making the Legion, labor unions, lawyers and doctors the particular fields for new prohibition campaigns.

"But this is a government by the majority," he said. "One of the best places to feel the pulse of the people is in a pullman smoking room.

"I have yet to sit in on a smoker conversation where the subject did not eventually drift to prohibition and stay there for a thorough discussion. I believe we should find out what the American people want. That will end it, one way or another."

The method of "finding out," Stevens said, was "up to the states."

However, Ernest H. Cherrington, chairman of the prohibition board of strategy, said "it is self-evident that the action taken by the delegates to the Legion convention was not representative of the whole body."

Dry Legionnaires will be reached in the new drive planned by his board which believes "the great body of these ex-soldiers have not found opportunity for expression through their organization."

The drys also will direct a campaign toward local labor unions "whose support of this national policy is being ignored by professional labor leaders."

The board said it believed a majority of the Legion and labor, attorneys and physicians "is in favor of the maintenance of the 18th amendment."

Despite the froth of words over prohibition and beer, Stevens said his conferences in the capital were more concerned with rehabilitation measures to be discussed in legislative halls this winter. On the bonus question he said:

"The president made a fine presentation, and it was cordially received. But I realize that, even so, many bills for the bonus probably will be introduced at the next session of congress. However, it is my belief the Detroit action was the considered judgment of the Legion that the delegates truly presented the sentiment of the people back home."

Old Sayings Will Bring 30 Cash Prizes Totalling $2,300

Reprints of All Back Pictures and Valuable Reference List Free on Request.

BY THE PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR.

The word "free" must be employed repeatedly to describe the generous conditions surrounding The Constitution's $2,300 proverb picture contest. Here are two free helps, of particular interest to those who missed the preliminary announcements, or the first few pictures, and who have just decided to go out after the first prize of $1,000, or one of the other 29 attractive prizes:

1. Reprints of all of the proverb pictures up to date. The reprints of the first 15 pictures will be mailed without obligation to newcomers into the contest, or those who have missed any of the early pictures. Two cents in postage must be sent along with requests for the back pictures to cover postage. The reprints are also available to those who call in person at the office of The Constitution.

2. A list of 2,000 old and new proverbs. This list is a valuable reference work and will prove to be of great help to contestants. Many of the world's greatest historical figures contributed their wit and wisdom to this compilation, which may be had by calling at the office of The Constitution, or by mail for a two-cent stamp.

One thousand dollars in cash will be the compensation for the contestant who turns in the largest number of correct old sayings for the series of pictures.

The Constitution will not urge contestants to do any kind of outside work during the contest. The contest does not make necessary the soliciting of subscriptions or votes, and non-subscribers are invited to take part.

Son Held for Entering Shop Owned by Father

Arrested, charged with attempting to burglarize his father's key shop at 15 1-2 South Forsyth street, G. B. Spain, 27, of 406 Holderness street, told police that he had gone into the store to sleep. Patrolmen M. D. Cartwright and Ben Maynard, who were summoned to the scene by a pedestrian who had seen him at the window, reported that they found the front door glass broken in. Spain's father had told the patrolman on the beat a few days before that he had been missing money from the shop, the police report said.

THREE MISSOURIANS SEEK CONGRESS POST

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 27.—(AP)—The first of seven vacancies in the national house of representatives, caused by deaths since the last general elections, will be filled Tuesday when the seventh Missouri district selects a successor to the late Sam C. Major, democrat, of Fayette.

The election has attracted state and national interest as a possible barometer of what the trends will be in 1932. Filling of this and other vacancies will have an important bearing on whether the republicans will retain the house organization or lose control to the democrats.

The seventh Missouri district normally is democratic by 1,500 to 3,500. Major carried the district in five of the last seven elections, losing to Roscoe C. Patterson, now United States senator, in 1920, and to John W. Palmer, again the republican nominee, in 1928.

This time the situation has been somewhat complicated by the entrance into the race of L. L. Collins, independent anti-prohibition candidate, formerly a democratic leader here. Palmer and Robert D. Johnson, the democratic nominee, have the indorsement of the Anti-Saloon League.

Farewell Sermons Delivered by Dodge

In his radio sermon Dr. Dodge took as his subject, "The Church and Progressive Thinking," in which he enumerated the values of the church as an essential social institution. In his sermon at Central Congregational, the retiring pastor reviewed briefly the notes of the prophetic ministry, and the power of faith.

MAN STILL SOUGHT IN CARRAN KILLING

'Bud' James, Said To Have Been Woman's Companion, Not Found.

Search for the man who is said to have been seen with Mrs. Rommie Carran in Campbell county last Monday morning prior to the slaying of her husband, C. M. Carran, Jacksonville accountant, has not produced results, although at least two men of the name revealed by Mrs. Carran have been questioned, Sheriff Ed Creel, of Campbell, said Sunday night.

Mrs. Carran told Campbell county officers that a "Bud" James, of Atlanta, was with her in the Carran automobile the morning before Carran's body was found by the roadside near Stonewall. Sheriff Creel said that two men of this name have been located and questioned, but neither answers the description of the man sought and both have alibis.

Alfred M. Carran, of Detroit, father of the slain man, arrived at Fairburn Sunday. Arrangements for the funeral are being made by Mr. Carran with Holsomback's funeral parlors.

Mrs. Carran is in the county jail at Fairburn under a coroner's jury recommendation that she be held as an accomplice.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The curb jiggled nervously last week, responding to the swift changes of sentiment that characterized financial markets everywhere.

The general trend was lower until the later sessions when some recovery took place. Precautions against too bad a break were taken on Monday when the exchange authorities banned short selling on the theory that some protection was advisable in view of the British crisis. Rallying tendencies on this market while the order was in effect were less aggressive than on the big board and what gains had been made disappeared swiftly in the Thursday break. Some of the ground had been retraced by the week-end.

Selling which dribbled in almost steadily suggested some strong box liquidation, although professional operations accounted for a large part of the total dealings. There was continued pressure against the utilities, with the result that many found new lows. Electric Bond & Share hit a new bottom at 18 3-4. Commonwealth Edison, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, American Gas, American Light and others were rather sharply depressed.

Two prominent foreign stocks, Woolworth Ltd. and Ford Ltd., slumped several points. Ford of Canada "A" also was weak, but much more spectacular declines developed in the familiar group of high-priced specialties as well as in numerous inactives. Oils dropped, with the widest variations in pipe line shares.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings again reflect some additional payments through the banks. The total last week for the leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $7,246,870,000 was 15.6 per cent less than that of last year. At New York city, the amount was $5,022,577,000, a decline of 14.2 per cent, while for all cities outside New York $2,224,203,000 showed a reduction of 18.6 per cent. Clearings last week were only slightly less than the exceptionally heavy total of the previous week, and with that exception were the largest for any week back to the middle of July. The decline from the previous week was only $55,306,000, or 0.8 per cent. Larger stock dealings are reflected in the clearings at New York city. At a number of the leading outside centers, the decline from a year ago was very much smaller than it has been for many months past, notably at the eastern and some of the southern centers, while at Cincinnati a substantial increase appears.

Bank clearings for the week, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., and average daily bank clearings for the year to date, are compared herewith (000 omitted):

Business World Encouraged By 'Clearing Atmosphere'

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The hope that the violent convulsions in the economic structure during the last week may represent the final gasps of depression has mitigated the shock to business confidence.

The British crisis, together with wage reductions by some of America's leading corporations, are widely felt to have cleared the atmosphere considerably, in both foreign and domestic affairs, but most commentators point out that the ceremony of finally lowering the depression to a peaceful grave will take time.

The week's reports on domestic business and trade again failed to indicate any palpable gains or important losses, but, as the Guaranty Trust Company points out in its monthly survey, to be published tomorrow, "with European affairs still in such an unsettled state, it is not surprising that domestic trade has failed to show any tangible signs of improvement."

Most branches of industrial and commercial activity thus far have not responded to the stimulating influences usually experienced at this time of year, the survey continues, and in some directions, where expansion has been noted, there is little encouragement for the belief that it reflects anything but purely seasonal forces at work.

The textile, shoe and apparel industries continue to maintain an encouraging degree of activity, as well as some other lighter lines of goods essential to everyday needs.

However, they have not exerted as yet any visible quickening effect on other industries, particularly the basic lines. In fact the Guaranty survey says that recent weekly reports indicate that activity in most lines has declined further.

"It seems clear," the survey adds, "that any marked improvement in business will have to await a return of confidence in conditions abroad."

The Standard Statistics Company says that such betterment as will be witnessed during the remainder of the year probably will be postponed until November, and will not attain full seasonal proportions.

While violent disagreement exists as to the desirability of wage reductions, such as the fresh wave of cutting, which has come in the last week with the 10 per cent reduction by the United States Steel Corporation, there is a widespread feeling that final settlement of the problem removes a disturbing element of uncertainty and builds a firmer foundation for the eventual upturn now so generally expected next spring.

In commodities, a flurry of speculation in bar silver carried the price of that metal up to around the year's best prices.

The effect on the British situation upon silver is not yet clear, and speculators seem to be actuated by the vague tradition that anything that hurts gold should help silver. If, indeed, silver does regain a substantial portion of its former purchasing power, it should have a decidedly vitalizing effect upon world trade, in restoring the buying power of the far east and Mexico.

Freight car loadings report was for the week containing the Labor Day holiday, so was not comparable to the previous week. Some seasonal adjusted indices indicated that the drop was a little larger than might be attributed to the holiday.

The mercantile reviews said trade had been hurt by unseasonably hot weather. Steel production eased off slightly. Building is being maintained around the August levels by several large projects. Electric power consumption for the third week of the month compared a little more favorably with last year than the first two weeks did.

"With the great reductions in the wages of capital and the lowered costs of living through lower commodity prices, wage readjustments have been forced as part of the general situation. That wages could maintain a position in opposition to the general trends was not logically conceivable."

NEW ORLEANS COTTON SUFFERS LIGHT LOSSES

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Trading has been more active in the cotton market here the past week than in any like period this season. On the other hand, prices have been nervous and erratic, mainly due to the readjustments necessary as a result of the suspension of the gold standard in Great Britain. While the immediate effect of this action was price inflation in England, the first effect on this side of the Atlantic was a downward course of prices on the belief that the decline in sterling would reduce the buying power of Great Britain and her colonies and adversely affect exports of cotton from this country.

The immediate effect of the British action was a decline in prices of cotton to new low levels for the season with October down to 6 cents. There soon developed a firmer tone in the market, however, largely as the result of extensive straddle trading between the markets. The sharp advance in silver and a firm stock market coupled with good trade and speculative buying soon turned prices upward and by the middle of the week prices had recovered about $3 a bale from the early lows.

The advance in silver, which at one time reached above 19d per ounce in London, was a stimulating influence, as it was pointed out that this would greatly enhance the buying power of oriental countries and countries of South America, where silver is the main medium of exchange. The foreign markets developed considerable strength and on Thursday Liverpool reported spot sales of 45,000 bales, the largest daily total on record, in fact, double the previous record total of 23,000 bales dating back to April 30, 1897.

Late in the week prices declined rather sharply with weakness in the stock market and on Friday October dropped to a new low for the season at 5.93 on the issue of October notices for 38,000 bales here. As the notices were stopped promptly by spot interests there was some slight recovery from the lowest and the close on Saturday showed net losses for the week of only 12 to 13 points.

	High.	Low.	Close	Last Year
Oct.	6.58	5.93	6.02	10.14
Dec.	6.82	6.17	6.25	10.39
Jan.	6.92	6.31	6.35	10.48
Mar.	7.12	6.53	6.53	10.65
May	7.32	6.70	6.70	10.85

Railway Age says railroad stock prices on September 19 were on an average the lowest since April, 1897, while the average price of industrial stocks on the September date was 73 per cent higher than when it reached bottom in the 1921 depression. It asserts that the principal reason for the present prices of railroad shares is that current net earnings "are the worst ever reported."

COTTON GOODS SALES EXCEED PRODUCTIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Our sales this week have again been in excess of production, this time by about 10 per cent. There has been a decided increase in the volume of print cloth business this week. Although prices have recorded a further drop of 1-8c, more print cloths have been sold this week than in any week since the last of June. These sales were mostly for quick and October delivery. There was a good volume of business in narrow sheetings, largely for the bag trade and other manufacturing purposes, also of wide goods for manufacturing trades. Broadcloths continued active though scarcity of goods for early delivery kept sales below last week's level. Sheets and pillowcases were conspicuously active and towels moved in good volume.

Generally speaking, the fall business has been slow in coming in. Cutters, converters and jobbers still have a quantity of goods to buy for delivery during the next three months and it looks as if the customary heavy September and early October volume would be distributed this year between September, October and, possibly, early November. In many grey goods constructions the spot situation has continued to grow gradually tighter though not enough so yet to attract more than passing comment but, as the volume of unfilled orders is built up, this situation will begin to make itself plain to all.

The dropping of the gold standard by Great Britain has added, for the time being at least, to the uncertainties concerning values. It has led to record-breaking sales of spot cotton in the Liverpool market, and in connection with the advance in silver has brought about a decidedly better feeling in Manchester concerning the far eastern trade. Just what effects it will have on our country is still uncertain. Stocks registered a very rapid advance on Wednesday and an equally rapid decline yesterday, showing the confusion that exists. It would hardly seem that it could affect Great Britain's export trade favorably and at the same time be favorable to ours.

BONDHOLDERS' PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

To the Holders of Bonds of the City of Asheville, North Carolina; of Buncombe County, North Carolina; and of the several School, Sanitary, Water, Sewer, Road and Bridge Districts of Buncombe County, North Carolina:

Buncombe County, North Carolina, and the several special districts located therein, and the City of Asheville, located in Buncombe County, are in default in the payment of the principal and/or interest of their outstanding bonds. As these defaults are inter-related, a Bondholders' Protective Committee has been formed to conserve the interests of the holders of the outstanding bonds of all of these political organizations, including the outstanding bonds heretofore issued by the Towns of West Asheville, Biltmore, Kenilworth and South Biltmore, which have been annexed by the City of Asheville. The prompt deposit of bonds with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York as Depositary, under the terms of the Deposit Agreement dated September 14, 1931, is strongly urged, as it is believed that the holders of the bonds of all these defaulting communities can best protect their interests by creating a single organization to seek a solution of their common problem.

FORMER GEORGIAN KILLS TWO WOMEN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Refused permission to see his three children, C. B. Coleman, 40, today shot and killed his estranged wife, Sarah, 28, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Maude Swearingen, 63, and then fired two pistol shots into his own body in an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide.

Police said Coleman, an automobile mechanic, who had been separated from his wife for five months, went to his home and demanded to see his children. When his request was denied, Coleman drew a pistol and shot his wife and mother-in-law through the head.

Walking to the back of the house, Coleman fired a bullet into his own head, but did not inflict a fatal wound. He then strode into his yard, reloaded his pistol, entered the house again and fired a bullet just above his heart. He was taken to a hospital where attendants said he may recover.

The shooting was witnessed by Coleman's three children, Billy, 8; Raymond, 6, and Sarah, 3. A fourth child, Claude Eugene, 12, is visiting relatives at Conyers, Ga.

Upon his arrival at a hospital Coleman was placed under a police guard and formally charged with murder.

Police said an inquest would be held as soon as Coleman's condition permits.

Hearing the shots, Patrolman D. G. Butler rushed into the house and found the two women dead and Coleman lying on the floor, seriously wounded. As he advanced, Butler said, Coleman drew his pistol and threatened the patrolman's life. Quickly drawing his own gun, Butler disarmed the man and summoned an ambulance.

Police said Coleman saw his children at his house yesterday and this morning, but that when he returned this afternoon his wife refused to let him see them. The shooting followed.

Son Held for Entering Shop Owned by Father

Arrested, charged with attempting to burglarize his father's key shop at 151-2 South Forsyth street, G. B. Spain, 27, of 406 Holderness street, told police that he had gone into the store to sleep. Patrolmen M. D. Cartwright and Ben Maynard, who were summoned to the scene by a pedestrian who had seen him at the window, reported that they found the front door glass broken in. Spain's father had told the patrolman on the beat a few days before that he had been missing money from the shop, the police report said.

THREE MISSOURIANS SEEK CONGRESS POST

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 27.—(AP)—The first of seven vacancies in the national house of representatives, caused by deaths since the last general elections, will be filled Tuesday when the seventh Missouri district selects a successor to the late Sam C. Major, democrat, of Fayette.

The election has attracted state and national interest as a possible barometer of what the trends will be in 1932. Filling of this and other vacancies will have an important bearing on whether the republicans will retain the house organization or lose control to the democrats.

The seventh Missouri district normally is democratic by 1,500 to 3,500. Major carried the district in five of the last seven elections, losing to Roscoe C. Patterson, now United States senator, in 1920, and to John W. Palmer, again the republican nominee, in 1928.

This time the situation has been somewhat complicated by the entrance into the race of L. L. Collins, independent anti-prohibition candidate, formerly a democratic leader here. Palmer and Robert D. Johnson, the democratic nominee, have the indorsement of the Anti-Saloon League.

DRYS PLAN DRIVE WITHIN LEGION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Henry L. Stevens Jr. arrived here today to find the American Legion, which he now heads, named as a special objective in 1932 campaign plans of organized prohibition forces.

The new national commander of Legionnaires came to return President Hoover's unexpected call on the Detroit convention, where the vote was cast that stirred dry leaders to action. He will see Mr. Hoover tomorrow.

His voice a trifle hoarse from a week of talking politics, Stevens was looking forward to solitude and fishing at Roanoke, Va. He met a war-muster of drys intent upon reaching prohibition adherents in the Legion whom they contend did not attend the convention.

A two-day meeting of the board of strategy of the national conference of organizations supporting the 18th amendment had just drafted a plan of attack making the Legion, labor unions, lawyers and doctors the particular fields for new prohibition campaigns.

"But this is a government by the majority," he said. "One of the best places to feel the pulse of the people is in a pullman smoking room.

"I have yet to sit in on a smoker conversation where the subject did not eventually drift to prohibition and stay there for a thorough discussion. I believe we should find out what the American people want. That will end it, one way or another."

The method of "finding out," Stevens said, was "up to the states."

However, Ernest H. Cherrington, chairman of the prohibition board of strategy, said "it is self-evident that the action taken by the delegates to the Legion convention was not representative of the whole body."

Dry Legionnaires will be reached in the new drive planned by his board which believes "the great body of these ex-soldiers have not found opportunity for expression through their organization."

The drys also will direct a campaign toward local labor unions "whose support of this national policy is being ignored by professional labor leaders."

The board said it believed a majority of the Legion and labor, attorneys and physicians "is in favor of the maintenance of the 18th amendment."

Despite the froth of words over prohibition and beer, Stevens said his conferences in the capital were more concerned with rehabilitation measures to be discussed in legislative halls this winter. On the bonus question he said:

"The president made a fine presentation, and it was cordially received. But I realize that, even so, many bills for the bonus probably will be introduced at the next session of congress. However, it is my belief the Detroit action was the considered judgment of the Legion that the delegates truly presented the sentiment of the people back home."

Mrs. Carran told Campbell county officers that a "Bud" James, of Atlanta, was with her in the Carran automobile the morning before Carran's body was found by the roadside near Stonewall.
